Golden Lure of Quins:

$50,000 Offered For Babes' Use

MARIE EMILIE CECILE

ANNETTE YVONNE

2-YEAR PLAN TURNED DOWN

The third article of a new and astonishing series of hitherto unpublished revelations of the battle of governmental Big Business and the parents for control of the Dionne quintuplets is related today by Win Brooks of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser staffs. Mr. Brooks has already told of the millions of dollars of profits made by the province of Ontario by its public exhibitions of the children; today he tells how rapidly the "commercial value" of the Quins rose and how Ontario profits from the gigantic influx of tourists to Quintuplet-land.

By WIN BROOKS
Staff Writer, Boston Evening American

Callander, Ont., July 21 — The early guardianship board for the Dionne quintuplets was prepared at one time to sell all their contract rights for a two-year period for $50,000.

Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe tells about it with a chuckle, as well he might, inasmuch as the Quins' earnings for themselves in this two-year period is just under the half-million dollar mark.

"We were hard up for money in the beginning and didn't know just where it was coming from to do the things that we felt necessary to do.

"A certain syndicate had offered $50,000 for full rights, including pictures and all other contracts. We had the offer under consideration for quite a while and had just reached a decision to accept it when the offer was reduced to $45,000.

"While we were debating that—sure it was worth more—the offer dropped to $40,000. So we turned it down."

The value of the Quins to themselves, in the building up of their own fund, and to all Ontario in the attraction of the tourists, has increased steadily as they developed from babes to little ladies, cut their teeth and began to walk around.

WARN U. S. CITIZENS IN SPAIN

SMITH PLANS DEAL ATTACK IN BOSTON

New York, July 21 (INS) — Former Governor Alfred E. Smith will make one or more speeches during the Presidential campaign and will urge the defeat of President Roosevelt, but is still undecided on the question of mentioning Governor Alfred M. Landon by name, the Evening Journal said in an exclusive story today.

"To all intents and purposes," the story added, "Smith will take the stump for the Kansas governor while avoiding any connection with the Republican national committee officially."

According to present plans, the Journal said, Smith's first speech will be in Boston, where he will be introduced by former Governor Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts.

"At no time did Smith plan to speak under the auspices of the Republican national committee," the story said.

This Scene Is Being Repeated in Spain's Newest Revolt

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

It's brother against brother as Spanish blood once again flows in the streets of Madrid, Spain, where this scene was taken two years ago during a similar revolt. The death toll of Spain's newest civil war is mounting every hour. The Leftist government says it is a "Fascist" uprising against a progressive republic. The rebels declare that they want to "save Spain" with a "glorious and patriotic army" and that their movement is one of "restoration."

REBELS LOSE BATTLE IN MADRID

BULLETIN

Washington, July 21 (AP)—Reports indicating Americans in Spain's civil war area are safe were made public today by the state department. Those in Madrid, however, have been urged by the American embassy to remain indoors and arrangements have been made for their transfer to the embassy if necessary.

Madrid, July 21 (INS)—For the second time in 24 hours, rebellion flared in the heart of Madrid today as the government was dispatching strong expeditionary forces to insurrectionary strongholds in the provinces.

The Madrid outbreak occurred when a group of insurgent soldiers and engineers attacked a detachment of Marxist militiamen in the Prado, fashionable promenade in the heart of the capital.

"The rebels were put to flight," the announcement said, "after a short encounter." No estimate of casualties was given.

MANY HELD PRISONERS

The engagement followed by less than 24 hours the government's bloody siege of the Montana barracks, where a large force of insurgents surrendered after a four-hour bombardment by government artillery and aircraft.

Lottery Tickets Spurned by Judge Who Fines Two

Canadian lottery promoters ought to check their lists a little more closely before they mail their books.

Judge Elijah Adlow of the municipal court today was hearing two cases where South End men were charged with setting up and promoting a foreign lottery, when he remarked:

"Why, the Canadian promoters even sent me a book of tickets, telling me I had been selected as an agent and offering a commission if I'd sell their tickets!"

The honor was declined, naturally, the judge added. But he fined Charles A. Stanwood, 71, and Harry Campbell, 65, both of Worcester street, South End, for having lottery books in their possession.

Fines were $100 each. The men appealed. Stanwood, police testified, is drawing an $8 a week old age pension here.

AMOSKEAG ASSETS ORDERED LIQUIDATED

The last hope for saving the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company vanished today when Federal Judge George C. Sweeney announced he will order liquidation of the assets.

It is understood this action will be taken because at the present time the overhead is approximately $2000 a day, and unless the company is immediately liquidated, the corporation and stockholders would continue to lose this amount.

Through closing of the plant at Manchester, N. H., largest cotton textile mill in the world, the way would be open for reorganization and reopening, according to the experts.

As soon as Judge Sweeney issues his liquidation order, trustees will be appointed and the full report of Arthur Black, feledal master, is expected within a few days.

POSTPONE HEARING

Meanwhile today, the hearing by the Sabath Congressional Committee scheduled for Thursday to look into the financial structure of the concern, was announced as postponed until next Tuesday, because some of the witnesses called are out of the state.

The troubles of Amoskeag, aired

7 Injured in New Hampshire Crash, Two May Die

Nashua, N. H., July 21—Seven persons, two of whom may die, were seriously injured today in a head-on collision of two automobiles on the Daniel Webster highway in Merrimac.

All were taken to Memorial Hospital in this city.

The most seriously hurt are Mrs. Ethel M. Vose, 60, of Westford, Mass., and Armand Mason of Bridge street, Manchester.

Mrs. Vose was pinned under the dash of the car in which she was riding and the ambulance crew were unable to get her out. Firemen were called and freed her after an hour's work, cutting away the tangled steel.

Both her legs were broken and she has internal injuries. Mason was hurled through the windshield of the other car, striking on his head.

The others who were injured are Wallace and Ernest Pollard of Westford, sons of Mrs. Vose; Mrs. Thomasine Hughes of Westford, Mrs. Mary A. Feaney of South Acton, Mass., and Alexander Boucher of West Bridge street, Manchester.

YOUTH BOOKED IN STRAP DEATH

A second suspect was arrested at gun point in his Roxbury home by police of the Special Service Squad today for questioning in connection wit hthe murder of Harry P. Bradley, Waltham Watch Company watchman.

The youth, a paroled Concord reformatory inmate, refused to answer questions at police headquarters and was booked on suspicion of armed robbery and murder.

Boston officials believe that the two youths in custody and a third being sought are linked with the brutal slaying and that the capture of the third youth will

OHIO GOING HEAVILY FOR G. O. P., GOV. LANDON TOLD

NEW DEAL BOND UNLOADING FACES EXPERT STUDY

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Topeka, Kas., July 21 (INS) — Governor Alfred M. Landon favors creation of a non-partisan commission of experts to conduct a basic study for the purpose of simplifying and improving Federal banking laws.

This was disclosed today by Representative John B. Hollister of Cincinnati, ranking Republican member of the House Banking and Currency Committee, after a conference with the Republican nominee for President.

Hollister also revealed Governor Landon is deeply concerned over the Roosevelt administration's action in unloading fabulous sums of government bonds in Federal Reserve and member banks.

Hollister said:

"I was particularly interested to talk over with Governor Landon the matter of a non-partisan commission of experts on banking to begin as soon as possible a basic study of all of our federal banking laws with a view to their simplification and improvement.

"The operation of our national banks, of the Federal Reserve System and of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation are closely interrelated, but frequently laws governing one of these establishments are passed without proper consideration of their effect on the others, leading to conflicts and ambiguities. In addition, experience has shown us that there are many ways in which banking may be improved by additional legislation.

MONEY DISCUSSED

"Such a commission might very well be patterned after the Aldrich commission of a quarter of a century ago, which studied the banking problems of the country for several years, and out of whose deliberations the Federal Reserve System arose.

"In this connection," he added, "we talked over the disadvantageous effect of New Deal monetary policies on our international trade and business in general.

"I also took up with Governor Landon the closely related question of how the unprecedented governmental expenditure, with continued unbalancing of the budget, not only weakens the position of the Federal Reserve Banks and member banks, which are choked with the results of government bonds which shows no intention of meeting its obligations, but also brings nearer every day the grave issue of currency inflation or unbridled credit inflation.

SPEED LETTER

"I found Governor Landon to be very well informed on all these subjects, not only with respect to their legislative history but in their bearing on our present national problems."

Governor Landon meanwhile reported he had completed his speech, accepting the Republican presidential nomination here Thursday night. He was resting from all political activity pending the ceremonies.

His acceptance speech will strike a major keynote for the coming campaign. In it, he will discuss some national issues in detail, while touching others briefly for further reference later in the campaign.

One of his advisers described the speech as representing the "viewpoint of an average American citizen toward governmental problems of today.

"It will be free from invective," he added, and constructive in character.

"It will be worthy of a man about to be elected President," he concluded.

EXPECT 75,000

The speech will run about 3500 words, comparable to the 1972 uttered by President Roosevelt in his acceptance of the Democratic nomination at Philadelphia three weeks ago. In the past, most Presidential candidates have delivered 7000 to 8000 word orations.

The Governor has called off all political appointments for the time being, but he will visit his office to transact state business. Tomorrow is expected to greet some of the early arrivals, and Thursday he will be in the hands of the notification committee headed by Representative Bertram Snell of New York.

The Topeka arrangements committee has about completed its plans for a huge "Private State" parade here Thursday afternoon. About 50 special trains and thousands of motor cars are expected to bring a crowd of 75,000 here to view the parade, with thousands more arriving late in the day for the acceptance ceremony.

Mail Vote "Padding" Hint Slows Count Total

Just a word of warning to those who would "stuff the ballot box" in the Boston Evening American-Boston Sunday Advertiser Straw Vote:

It can't be done. This is a sincere and honest effort to check voting sentiment. The mail tally reported in the Boston Sunday Advertiser was up to midnight Friday. Today's does not include later mail votes in Massachusetts.

In Saturday's first mail and in others subsequently, counters reported bundles of fifty ballots coming from Boston, Brockton, Braintree, Quincy and Randolph, all in the same handwriting and all marked for Governor Curley for U. S. Senator.

The majority of these same mailed votes named John W. Haigis, Republican candidate, for Massachusetts' gubernatorial choice. This mail is being checked to avoid obvious "padding." When it is checked, the results will be announced.

WEEKS LAUDS G. O. P. MORALE

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Enthusiastic over his party's prospects for a win next November, Chairman Sinclair Weeks of the Republican state committee, today declared that the visit of Chairman John D. M. Hamilton of the national committee to Massachusetts, has given great impetus to the Landon-Knox candidacies and the Republican state ticket.

"Mr. Hamilton's visit brought about a gathering of leaders of Republican organizations from every city and town in the state," Chairman Weeks stated.

"Their enthusiasm and response to the address of the national chairman, together with their demonstrated willingness to get out and work for party success this year, was a revelation.

"It is extremely inspiring to me and gives me a tremendous feeling of confidence that there will be no laggards in the ranks in the important work ahead of us the next three months."

Weeks declared that Chairman Hamilton made an extremely fine impression and that all who met him recognized his ability and gift of leadership.

"His coming has done wonders for the morale of the party here," he added. "It has lifted the spirit of those who are battling for Republican success.

"I am confident his visit has given great impetus to the Landon and Knox ticket as well as to the state ticket, which I have observed have been on the up swing since the conventions."

FARLEY CLAIMS NEW GAINS

New York, July 21 (US)—Fresh gains in his fight for President Roosevelt's re-election were claimed by Democratic National Chairman Farley.

The new labor party, an outgrowth of the Non-Partisan Labor League, which was organized by George L. Berry, has endorsed President Roosevelt and Governor Lehman here.

Farley said it would be found playing an active role in every other state where it can still get on the ticket.

The discord which marked the end of the Townsend convention at Cleveland and from which Gomez Smith, Oklahoma Democrat, was practically ousted from the Townsend party, Farley said, could not help but prove of aid to the Democratic campaign. Farley added:

"Gomez Smith must be a very able man. He proved that in the recent Oklahoma primaries when he came very close to capturing the nomination for United States Senator.

"If he has been reported, Smith is now going to work for the President, we will welcome his help."

Farley denied recent charges by Republican leaders that the Democrats had begun a whispering campaign, directed at Governor Landon.

The Democratic leader, however, refused to comment to any extent on the charge of John Hamilton, Republican national chairman, that federal emergency agencies were being used to recruit Democratic voters. Farley said:

"Over-enthusiasm may have led some Democratic workers into indiscretions. Their acts, however, do not represent the purpose and intent of the Democratic national committee in this campaign."

What Straw Vote Shows:

LODGE LEADS, 7-3 MAINE O. K.'S WHITE

MAINE

Still more marked gains were registered by Maine Republicans as the Boston Evening American-Boston Sunday Advertiser straw ballot ended the seventh day of sounding out sentiment.

During this seventh day the straw ballot car stopped in Bridgton, Norway, Farmington, Rumford and Bethel, with the Republican candidates showing remarkable strength in all five communities.

Although Rumford has always been a Democratic stronghold in Maine, she gave Senator Wallace H. White, Jr., Republican candidate for the United States Senate, 39 votes as against 44 for Governor Louis J. Brann, the Democratic aspirant.

BARROWS AHEAD

In the same strong Democratic town, Lewis C. Barrows, Republican candidate for governor, topped his Democratic opponent F. Harold Dubord, in the returns by 45 to 38.

Results in the Maine straw balloting to date, including mail votes, are:

For United States Senator:
White 1117
Brann 1261

For Governor:
Barrows 1755
Dubord 958

G. O. P. ALWAYS GAINS

The town of Bridgton gave White 19, Brann 15, Barrows 22 and Dubord 13; Norway gave White 13, Brann 14, Barrows 21 and Dubord 11; Farmington returned White 41, Brann 9, Barrows 43 and Dubord 7, while Bethel turned in 11 for White, 14 for Brann, 13 for Barrows and 12 for Dubord.

All along the line thus far, even in the Democratic fortresses, the Republican candidates have displayed amazing strength.

MASSACHUSETTS

In an amazing rush to Republican candidates, voters in Orange, Turners Falls, Sunderland, Ashfield, Shelburne Falls, Adams and Greenfield shot Lodge and Haigis far into the lead as the seventh day ended in the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser straw ballot.

These seven communities gave Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., Republican candidate for the United States Senate, an aggregate of 602 votes as against only 58 for Governor Curley, the Democratic aspirant.

At the same time the voters in these seven places gave John W. Haigis, Republican candidate for governor, 789 votes as against but 61 for State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley, the Democrat.

COMPLETE TOTALS

Complete totals thus far in the Massachusetts race, with all except questionable mail votes included are:

For United States Senator:
Lodge 2168
Curley 861

For Governor:
Haigis 2405
Hurley 843

Thus, Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., has a lead of well over 7 to 3 on Governor Curley in the Senate race, while Haigis is out in front of State Treasurer Hurley in a ratio of approximately 3 to 1.

VOTE FOR LODGE

Little Orange gave Lodge 10 to Curley's 2 and Haigis 14 to none for Hurley.

Turners Falls turned in 271 for Lodge to 14 for Curley and 370 for Haigis against only 11 for Hurley.

Sunderland returned 74 for Lodge to 2 for Curley, 11 for Haigis and 1 for Hurley; Greenfield 274 for Lodge, 39 for Curley, 350 for Haigis, 33 for Hurley and 1 for Lieutenant-Governor Joseph F. Hurley; Ashfield 7 for Lodge, 2 for Curley, 8 for Haigis and 1 for Hurley; Shelburne Falls 12 for Lodge, 2 for Curley, 14 for Haigis and none for Hurley, and Adams 20 for Lodge, 6 for Curley, 22 for Haigis and 5 for Hurley.

Manila, July 21 (AP)—The interisland steamer Isidoro Pons, carrying a crew of 43, ran on the rocks today off Paiauig point on the coast of Luzon island in the China sea. Her wireless failed in the middle of an SOS. The craft apparently was caught in a typhoon.

Martin Sees New England, Penn. Swing to Landon

New York, July 21 (US)—Armed with glowing reports from local, upstate and national leaders, Republican campaign managers today strengthened earlier predictions of a nation-wide sweep for Governor Landon and Colonel Knox.

Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr., in charge of the Eastern division of the national campaign committee, who returned Sunday from a swing through New England and Pennsylvania, said:

"I had been told the New England states, as well as Pennsylvania, were in good shape. Now I know they are. I saw for myself evidence of enthusiasm and an awakened spirit among the Republicans that guarantees a victory this Fall.

"On top of what I saw myself, the first man to come into my office this morning was Walter S. Montgomery, an Indiana newspaper publisher. He was on his way home from a convention of newspaper publishers. Montgomery told me a poll at the convention showed 80 per cent of the publishers convinced that Governor Landon would be elected."

Martin said he placed great confidence in the newspaper man's report. He said:

"I have found the newspaper editors and publishers have a better idea of the sentiment of the people than anyone else."

Anxious to get the campaign in the territory assigned to him moving as rapidly as possible, Martin said he would not even take out time to go to Topeka for the notification ceremonies. He said:

"From now on I have a 24-hour a day job here. We are going to carry New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. There can be no doubt of it.

"While I am not claiming Virginia, North Carolina and Florida, we have a fighting chance to carry all three. The defections among Democrats, dissatisfied with the New Deal in those three normally Democratic states, are so numerous and growing more so daily that I am going to spend a whole lot of time in them."

Martin said the recent attack on the New Deal by Senator Carter Glass had been "devastating" and added that it could not "do the New Deal any good."

Col. Roosevelt Plans Maine Landon Speech

New York, July 21 (AP)—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt will be one of the principal speakers in the Republican presidential campaign.

The former Gover-General of the Philippines visited Republican headquarters today and offered his services to Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr., Eastern division campaign manager.

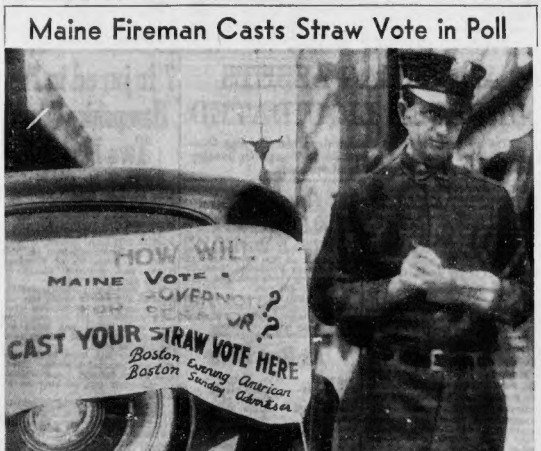

After their conference, Martin said the son of "T. R." would be a "headliner" in the campaign.

Colonel Roosevelt is expected to open his speaking tour late in August or early in September in Maine as part of the concentration of Republican efforts to win the State in September 14 elections.

After that Colonel Roosevelt will tour the West. Representative Martin said Republican leaders in Nebraska and Minnesota have asked particularly for Roosevelt's services.

Roosevelt is president of the National Republican Club, and although he has made no announcement on the subject, close friends are understood to be working to obtain the Republican nomination for Governor of New York for him.

RITCHIE IS HELD AFTER HEARING ON SLAYING

William H. Ritchie, 42, of West Newton street, was held without bail for the grand jury today, after a hearing in municipal court on a charge of murdering his sweetheart.

Ritchie stood calmly in the prisoner's dock while Hans C. Nelson of Quincy, present husband of Ritchie's first wife, testified that Ritchie confessed to him before surrendering to the police.

Ritchie is charged with strangling Jean McDonald Greslish, 28, on July 12, in the South End house where both lived.

The hearing was held before Judge Elijah Adlow and the prisBernard J. Killion, who was appointed by Judge Harold P. Williams of the Superior Court. No defense was offered. Ritchie was well-dressed, wearing a blue suit, blue shirt and blue and white striped tie.

Nelson, testified that Ritchie called on him and his wife on the afternoon of July 12 and had dinner with them. Nelson then drove Ritchie to Boston and returned home.

"About 10 o'clock a telephone call came to go over to West Newton street," said the witness. "When my wife and I got there he was sitting on the doorstep. He said to come upstairs and he pointed to the bed and said, 'Jean is dead, I killed her.'

"The body was covered over. I got panicky and said, 'Let's get out of here.' Outside I said, 'The best thing to do is to give yourself up,' and he did."

Judge Adlow asked what Ritchie said about killing the girl.

"He just said, 'I killed her' and motioned with his hands," replied Nelson, who illustrated with his own hands, while the prisoner watched him.

Patrolman Garrett Farrell told how Ritchie came up to him at the information desk at police headquarters at 12:01 a. m., to report the killing himself.

Farrell said he elicited the details and told his superiors.

Quiz Man On Torch Killing

Lawrence, July 21—Police had under arrest here today a 24-year-old man who, they claim, gave them important information on the two-month-old "torch murder" mystery of Mt. Washington, N. H.

Mrs. Elizabeth Freel of Clinton died in that mystery slaying and the hunt for her slayer has been vain.

The young man in custody, according to authorities, also is being questioned about purchase of counterfeit money in Boston and passing of it in various Massachusetts and New York cities.

In addition, authorities said, the prisoner told them of a man whose description tallies with that of a long-hunted "finger-man" of a group of Manchester, N. H., store bandits.

The other man, police said, was mentioned in connection with the "torch murder" of Mrs. Freel. A hunt is on for him now in Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont.

Authorities, who are holding the prisoner here on only a minor charge so far, were said to be impressed by the story of the Mt. Washington case, they said, and have called in New Hampshire police who worked on it.

Boston police and federal officials were notified of the alleged Boston counterfeiting headquarters. Two Boston police inspectors were sent here to talk to the prisoner.

The young man gave addresses in Concord and Manchester, N. H., as his past homes, police said, but he has been recently living at a Broadway, Lawrence, address.

The charred body of Mrs. Freel, wife of a Clinton utility executive, was found on the slopes of the mountain, close to the Vermont border, on May 21.

State Police Test

More than 2000 men have enrolled for mental and physical examinations for enlistment in the state police to fill 25 vacancies now existing in the department, according to Captain James P. Mahoney,

AL SMITH TO SPEAK HERE

pendent Democratic auspices.

Smith insists that Roosevelt, not he, has left the Democratic party and feels he can more consistently, as a Democrat, speak against the President's re-election."

The report that Al Smith had conferred yesterday with John D. M. Hamilton, Republican National Chairman, was confirmed today by close friends of the former governor.

The conference is understood to have taken place in Smith's Fifth avenue apartment and to have been a lengthy one.

The former governor, a leader in Democratic opposition to the Roosevelt administration, was said to have discussed with Hamilton various phases of the forthcoming Presidential campaign.

ELY GIVES SUPPORT

Hamilton, it was said, urged Smith to join actively in the drive to elect Governor Landon.

Last week during a conference with Ely, Hamilton was assured of Ely's support. As yet Ely, outspoken critic of the Roosevelt administration, has not decided whether he will take the stump for Governor Landon during the campaign.

Smith and Ely were two of five signers of an open statement to the Democratic National Convention, requesting delegates to repudiate President Roosevelt and nominate a "genuine Democrat."

Ely Calls Smith Plan To Talk "Good Idea"

Former Governor Joseph B. Ely today characterized as "a very excellent guess" the story of the New York Journal revealing that former Governor Alfred E. Smith will speak in Boston against President Roosevelt's candidacy.

"It is a good idea," said former Governor Ely, when told the story, said Smith probably will join with Ely in the anti-Roosevelt drive in Massachusetts, to be launched with a meeting in Boston.

Ely revealed that former Governor Smith had been trying to reach him by telephone in Boston yesterday, but Ely was out of town.

"I wouldn't be a bit surprised if it were true," Ely said in reference to the rally supposed to be in the making in Boston for the opening of the Smith anti-Roosevelt drive. "However there has been no definite step taken so far."

Ely said that the campaign would not be carried out under direction of the Landon-Republican forces, but would be conducted apart.

Today's
Boon-Doggle

Mysterious indeed are the ways of the Brain Trust.

The New Deal will spend $24,726 on schools in Las Animas County, Colorado.

A handsome new stone building at Kim accounts for $22,750 of this sum. Repairs to the school at Tobe will exhaust the remainder.

Why these two towns were selected as sites for improved educational facilities will probably never be known. Their combined population is exactly 223 souls, and there are 2350 illiterates in the county, at least 2300 of whom, it seems reasonable to suppose, will still be illiterate when the Works Progress Administration program is over and done and the bills come pouring in.

QUINTUPLET "BANKROLL" NEARING $500,000

Golden Lure of Dionne Quins:

Guardians Sought to Sell Rights to Babies for $50,000

LOVABLE BABIES CELEBRATING THEIR SECOND BIRTHDAY

CECILE MARIE YVONNE EMILIE ANNETTE

Evidence of the Dionne quins popularity is the government-controlled quintuplet fund, which is now approaching $500,000. Win Brooks, ace reporter for the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, reveals the battle of governmental Big Business and the parents for control of the famous babies. This picture shows Dr. Allan Dafoe with the famous quins as they celebrated their second birthday. Dr. Dafoe received $200 a month from the fund for superintending the care of the babies, while Papa Dionne receives $100 a month.

GROUP OFFERS $50,000 FOR QUINS

Now they come pretty close to being the Gold Dust Quins.

In the early stage of their commercialization, one firm offered $800 for an endorsement.

The guardians met the offer with an asking price of $1600, doubling it.

Meanwhile, several other firms of the same nature began bidding for the endorsement. Something like an auction developed.

The original company that offered $800, and could have bought it for $1600, finally won the contract—for $10,000.

Contract rights are zealously guarded and several suits based upon the claim of unauthorized use of the quintuplets' names for sales promotion purposes have been brought by the Quins through the guardians.

Yet, as was previously pointed out, the contract rights and the quintuplet fund represent but a very small portion of the income derived from this accident or miracle of birth.

The rest of the income is spread out over all Ontario and thousands of persons are deriving a living from the babies.

Sum Small

Papa Dionne, a few days after the wholesale flight of storks over his back-country farm, allegedly entered into an agreement with Ivan I. Speers, head of the Century of Progress Tour Bureau, to exhibit the Quins at the Chicago show.

"It would have meant their death," Dr. Dafoe told me.

"They could not have survived," Judge Valin said.

Thus Dionne himself was guilty of the first move leading up to the controversial and intensely bitter situation which today exists.

As it turned out after a rigid scrutiny of this contract, Papa Dionne would not have received a very large amount of wealth under it—certainly not as much as under the guardians' offer he recently turned down.

The only means to abrogate this contract appeared to be the appointment of a guardianship board and to this the Dionnes agreed.

Attorney-General Arthur W. Roebuck, of the Ontario province, on July 27, 1934, applied in the courts and received an order for appointment of guardians for the Quins. The first board consisted of Dr. Dafoe, Kenneth Morrison, a Callander general store proprietor; W. H. Alderson of the Red Cross and Oliver Dionne, grandfather of the babies.

U. S. Tourists

On January 7, 1935, investigating contracts under consideration by the guardians, the attorney-general stated that the Ontario government would not permit the Quins to be exhibited as a side show attraction.

This decision has been rigidly enforced.

The quintuplets have never been exhibited as a side show attraction.

They are being exhibited as the whole show!

The new playground at the Dafoe Hospital, completed two weeks ago, was constructed for exhibition purposes, as built that the public can have a close-up view of the children at play. No admission is charged but those who come to peak leave large sums of money in Ontario—at tourists camps, hotels, stores and concessions which have sprung up in the vicinity of the hospital.

Nearly all American tourists who come here to peek at the quintuplets—and they are moving through the playground at the rate of 3000 and 4000 a day—enter Canada directly into this province and do not leave Ontario while here.

The tremendous income to Ontario from tourists, a direct result of the exhibiting of the babies, is the cause of growing dissension between Ontario and the province of Quebec, natural habitat of the Canadiennes, and already the demand has been made on the floor of the Quebec Legislature that Ontario hand over the Quins to her sister province.

Striking the right commercial note and refusing to find any fault with the exhibiting itself, N. E. Larriviere, Quebec legislator, stressed Ontario's control of the quintuplets as a tourist attraction of vast proportions which is robbing Quebec of her due. This belief is widespread, especially in Montreal.

But thousands of Americans are daily pouring into Ontario who would never go to Quebec anyway, or come to Canada at all if it were not for the quintuplets, and the fact that they are on exhibition. They say so themselves.

Let's start at North Bay, the gateway to the north country which lies nine miles outside this little settlement, see what the Gold Dust Quins have done for the countryside.

The five hotels of North Bay are doing a gold rush business, daily filled to capacity with tourists from the United States, nightly turning away scores because of lack of accommodation.

The stores of North Bay are reaping a harvest from tourist trade and in all of them souvenirs of visits to Quintuplet Land are available.

Between North Bay and Callander, two years ago, there was nothing but a few scattered farm homes and one tourist camp.

Today there are an inn and tourist camps and cabins every few hundred feet. All of them are doing a thriving business.

All of these places have names. A favorite is "The Kwints."

Entering this town, the tourist passes under a huge arch, which reads: "Welcome to Callander."

There was no arch and few to be welcomed before the quintuplets.

Callander was, years ago, and is today to a certain extent, a lumber town. Once, in boom days, with the big log rafts towing down 80-mile-long Lake Nipissing, four big mills were running here, but when the quintuplets were born the industry had slacked off and the place was deader than a door nail, figuratively and literally not on the map.

Not lumber, but the Quins, is the town's thriving industry today, and while it is on the map that concession of identification was not necessary.

Everybody from Toronto north can tell you how to get to Callander and most everybody will do so although some complaints have been received here that in the Toronto region American tourists are being misinformed as to road conditions in an attempt to keep them and the dollars they represent in southern Ontario.

The roads are all right.

Quin Boom

The crossroads of Callander, the main corner, is where the tourist swings off the highway up the new Quintuplet road into the backwoods where, nearly three miles out of the center of town, the Dafoe Hospital is situated.

On one corner at this crossroads stands the Callander Hotel. George Windsor and his wife own and conduct it. They came up here from southern Ontario to see the quintuplets and they stayed to benefit from mothers who had the same idea.

The hotel was run down and not much worth while when the Windsors bought it. It has been rebuilt, refurnished and redecorated and is doing a land-office business catering to Quintuplet tourists.

It may be fairly said of this hotel and a majority of the other business enterprises launched on the Quintuplet boom that the prices are reasonable and the tourist gets his money's worth. Competition from new enterprises becomes keener every day.

On one corner across from the hotel is a new Quintuplet gasoline station, always busy. There are five big red pumps and each has a name painted on it in large letters. You guess the names and you can't be wrong.

Attached to the station is a little shop where you can buy quintuplet postcards, books and banners, soda pop or what have you.

On another corner is a tourist information booth which proclaims: "Information Free," and across from it on the fourth angle is the general store of Mr. Morrison, one of the early guardians, where are sold everything from groceries to Dr. Dafoe's authorized book on the care of babies, for which (meaning the book) there is great demand hereabouts from tourists mothers.

Most of the mothers dwelling in this district do not even have doctors when their children are born, and raise their broods of from 10 to 20 youngsters without any printed advice from anyone.

Before turning up the road toward Dafoe Hospital, glance down its extension across the main street and you will see the excursion steamer Sea Gull tied up at the wharf on Nipissing. Its sailing hours are deliberately arranged so you may see the Quins and catch the boat. You'll receive some literature—stuck under your windshield wiper—about the Sea Gull when you park your car out at the hospital.

So, let's go there now. It's the most cosmopolitan gathering place in the world.

PASS KEY CLUE IN CO-ED SLAYING

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN

Asheville, N. C., July 21 (INS)—Who left the pass key in the door of Room 224 in Battery Park Hotel the night Helen Clevenger, 18-year-old honor student of New York University, was attacked and slain?

The police were striving today to find the answer to this question. The key was found by Deputy Sheriff Thomas K. Brown after he went to the room, where the body of the girl, clad in green silk pajamas, was found last Thursday morning.

She had been mysteriously murdered during the height of an electric storm. Her assailant had stabbed her about the face with a sharp instrument and shot her once through the left lung with a .32-calibre bullet. The body was found seven hours later.

Three persons were still being questioned by police today. They are Mark Wollner, 35, internationally known concert violinist; Miss Mildred Ward, 19, his "alibi girl," with whom he had been keeping company, and Daniel H. Gaddy, 29-year-old night watchman at the hotel. A fourth person, Joe Urey, 27, a bellhop, was released when authorities became convinced he had no knowledge of the crime.

Exactly 12 pass keys had been issued to employes of the Battery Park Hotel, according to Sheriff Laurence Brown, who is conducting the investigation, and all but one of them has been accounted for.

Gaddy was questioned by Sheriff Brown, but Brown declined to reveal what, if anything, the night watchman had told him. It had been intimated the authorities do not believe Gaddy was implicated in the crime but feel that because of his presence in the hotel the night of July 15 he should be in a position to throw some light on the case.

As for Wollner, Sheriff Brown has ordered that he be left strictly alone. He was asked for a statement shortly after he was taken into custody "for questioning" last Saturday night. Since that time no one, not even the authorities, have interviewed him.

A diary was found in Miss Clevenger's room. She aparently had been writing in it when the assailant approached that night. Sheriff Brown emphatically denied today that Wollner's name had been found in the diary.

No charges have been made against Wollner, Miss Ward or Gaddy.

Wollner says he was at home that night. He was a roomer at the home of Mrs. Essie Ward, a widow, and her daughter, Mildred.

Miss Ward insisted Wollner had not been out of the house from 9:30 p. m. Wednesday until 8 o'clock the following morning.

Yet Miss Lavada Whitaker, 28, a next-door neighbor, made a statement to the police in which she said she saw Wollner entering the Ward home between 6 and 6:30 o'clock Thursday morning.

Significance was also attached to the statement of Charles English, 19, waiter in a cafe, who said Wollner came into his restaurant shortly after he opened the place at 6 a. m. and ordered a cup of coffee, saying he had been out all night.

JESSIE Will Leave STATE

MRS. COSTELLO IN COLLAPSE

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

"I'll get out of this town as soon as I can . . . I've had enough of it."

So spoke Jessie Costello today after the government took her Fay avenue, Peabody, home and sold it to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation for $6200.

Then she left with the children for a day in Boston. It was mostly to avoid having to talk to a lot of people, but it had something to do with her plans. Just what, she didn't want to say right now.

But the Jessie who has lost her home is a different Jessie today than the Jessie I knew in the past.

Jessie, for the first time, in years, broke down and wept.

"What will I do?

"Where will I go?" she repeated the questions between sobs.

She didn't seem to have the answer herself for to Jessie it was just a case of "nobody seems to care for us."

Back To Father

From her attorney Alan A. Zetlen of Salem, it was learned that Jessie and the children will in all probability go to the New Hampshire farm of her father, Andrew Fife.

Behind drawn windows, Jessie watched the entire proceedings in the auctioning of her home but she maintained strictest seclusion, sobbing alone, disheartened by her plight.

Acquitted of the poison slaying of her husband, Capt. William B. Costello, three years ago, and buffeted by adversities since that time, dark-haired and dark-eyed Jessie, who matched keen wits with a keen district attorney, was today just a woman, alone and unhappy.

Must Get Out

The house Bill Costello bought for her and their family was sold under the auction hammer of P. J. Sheey, Peabody auctioneer, as a disinterested group of people watched the proceedings.

And now Jessie must get out. Coldly and bluntly, that is just what she must do, or endure the ignomy of eviction proceedings.

"I couldn't stand being put out; that humiliation would be more than I could bear. But I'll go away as soon as I can."

Until the hammer of the auctioneer fell, sounding the sale and the homelessness of Mrs. Costello, she bore up bravely. She wasn't feeling any too good, her lawyer said, but she was "holding up."

Her lawyer said:

"She just went to pieces. Up to the very last, she thought there would be some way to save her home, and when it was over, and she realized she had lost it, she broke down.

Bitter Blow

"It was a bitter blow, and Jessie felt it keenly. She was worried about her children and what was to become of them."

Legally, Jessie must vacate the premises immediately. Or, protesting the sale, she could wait until eviction proceedings were brought and the court decided the legal merit of the sale.

"But Jessie won't wait for that," Attorney Zetlen said. "She wants neither the unpleasant publicity nor the humiliation attached to being put out. So she will make plans now to move as soon as she can."

Representing the government at the sale was Attorney Harry J. Ward. He bought the property for $6200, the amount of the indebtedness surrounding the property.

This six-weeks-old baby, Helen Dorothy Moloney, held here in the arms of its mother, Mrs. Alice Moloney, of 12 Supple street, Dorchester, must pay the dentist a visit this week. The reason is plainly evident. The infant has two lower teeth which interfere with her feeding.

6 Weeks Old Baby Going to Dentist

Though only six-weeks old tiny Helen Dorothy Moloney, of 12 Supple street, Dorchester, will have to pay the dentist a visit this week.

Much to the amazement of her proud mother, Mrs. Alice Moloney, two teeth suddenly appeared in the infant's lower jaw. They grew so rapidly that they interfered with the baby's feeding.

After consulting her physician Mrs. Moloney decided that a dentist would have to file the teeth down.

Tiny Helen's sisters, Muriel, 5, and Alice, 3, and her brother, Philip 18 months, can't quite understand why all the fuss about a couple of teeth.

LEWIS DEFIES A. F. OF L. IN "TRIAL"

Washington, July 21 (US)—John L. Lewis and representatives of the 12 member unions of the committee on industrial organization prepared to vote defiance of the American Federation of labor executive council.

The council had ordered the C. I. O. Unions to stand trial August 3 for "insurrection" in connection with their drive to organize the steel industry.

Lewis and his "rebel" unions, which will meet today for decision on the A. F. of L. order, gained new followers as strikers in Camden, N. J., appealed to them to seek investigation by the Department of Justice of strikebreakers' activities there.

U. S. INQUIRY ASKED

Strikers appealed to the C. I. O. to take up their fight to prevent interference with picketing and to ask the Justice Department to act under the new "Anti-Strikebreakers' Law," which prohibits importation of men across state lines to disturb peaceful picketers.

Strikers also asked for inquiry by the La Follette Senate committee investigating labor conditions.

Although it has been generally agreed Lewis and the C. I. O. will ignore the Federation mandate, it was reported William Green, president of the Federation, and others were hopeful the "rebels" would recede from their position and not widen the breach in the labor front.

The committee on industrial organization will take up the question of the drive for steel industry organization today, and has given assurances it will continue its campaign regardless of A. F. of L. orders.

NEW LAW PROBLEM

The Camden strikers' appeal to the C. I. O. was directed by Powers Hapgood, an organizer who was one of the scores arrested in the strike. John Brophy, director, replied:

"The C. I. O. will protest to the La Follette committee and other government agencies against violations of strikers' civil rights in Camden and illegal arrests of strikers."

Although Brophy said he would place the protests before the Department of Justice, Attorney-General Cummings has indicated he faces difficulties in enforcing the new law.

Each case necessitates thorough investigation to determine whether the strikers are engaged in "peaceful picketing" and whether the state allows picketing of any type.

Union Here Plans Stand on Labor Row

A local touch on the battle between William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers' Union, loomed here today.

It is expected that the convention of the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers Union of North America at its session today at the Parker House will take a definite stand on the current controversy.

Although Leon De Veze, president, refused to comment, it is understood that the question concerning industrial unions as opposed to craft unions will come up for debate before the convention adjourns.

The Poor Ole White House!

Washington, July 21 (US)—President Roosevelt lives in a "poor section" of the city.

The nation's most exclusive residence—The White House—is located in an area where rentals average $40 to $75 a month, a realty survey made public by the Federal Housing Administration today revealed.

Only two blocks were found in the immediate vicinity of the White House where rents average $75 to $100 per month, and none in excess of $100.

New Contender Takes Spurt Ahead In Stork Derby; Says Twins Soon Due

Hopes to Have 11 Babies By Fall

X-RAY BRINGS GOOD NEWS

By FRANK CHAMBERLAIN
Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Toronto, July 21—Like a dark horse in a sweepstake, Mrs. Hilda Graziano, 37-year-old Canadian mother who had seemed to have only slight chances of winning the Charles Vance Miller stork derby, suddenly took a spurt today ahead of the other contenders.

She argued that previous tabulation of her children failed to record one they had intended to name Sammy, if a boy, still-born in 1932, and announced that X-ray examination reveals that twins will be born to her next month.

CLAIMS 11 CHILDREN

"That will give me 11 children since Charles Vance Millar died in October, 1926, and it will put me in the lead for the $500,000," Mrs. Graziano declared.

This was the dark deep secret that her husband, Gus, vaguely discussed in June.

Today he said, "I haven't a doubt in the world that Hilda is the winner, and while last month I was willing to sign a compact with the other mothers, agreeing to split the money, now I will share with no one."

For the first time in the 10 years since the famous Toronto lawyer-sportsman died, leaving half a million dollars to the mother in his city who should give birth to the greatest number of children in the decade following his death, Mrs. Graziano listed the names and birth dates of her eligible children.

They are: Mike, born in December, 1926; Tony, born in October, 1927; Sara, born in August, 1928; Rosie, born in December, 1929; Mamie, born in October, 1930; Joe, born in December, 1931; un-named, stillborn in December, 1932; Sam, born in December, 1933; George, born in June 1935; add-twins expected in August, 1936.

"That will make 11, won't it?" Husband Gus chimed in, with all the assurance of a baby specialist. "Two of the nine children born in the last 10 years are dead. Seven are living. I have the registration certificates for all of them. And the doctor has told me that twins are coming."

Twins wouldn't be surprising in the Graziano family. While Mrs. Graziano herself hasn't had any double births to date, both her mother and Gus' mother had twins. Mrs. Graziano's mother has 14 children. She lives just outside Quebec City, Quebec, where French-Canadians are famous for their large families and where birth-control is almost unknown.

"My mother tells me that I must never believe in birth control," said Mrs. Graziano, today the tired-looking mother who wants to be a school teacher if she wins the $500,000. She married when she was 19, and declares, "I think girls ought to wait until they're 21 or 22 before getting married. But, of course, it's different if your man is working."

Her man, Gus, swarthy Italian market gardener, has been unemployed for five years and the family, living now in the city, has been on relief all that time. Last year they moved six times because they couldn't pay the rent, and they are again in arrears. The municipality allows them five loaves of bread and four quarts of milk a day, also $3.60 a week for groceries, but the Grazianos claim that isn't enough to keep them.

No compact to split the money appeals to Gus Graziano, now that he boasts leadership of all the other families in Toronto's strange stork marathon. He said today that if his wife wins the half million dollars, they intend to buy two cars, one for the social worker who has been kind to them in their troubled years, and one for the Grazianos. "And it will be the best car in the country," Gus guarantees. Then he's going to build a house for his family away out in the country.

HAS AMBITIONS

But Gus has the generosity born of sympathy. "All around our house I am going to build other houses," he said, "for other families where there are 12, 13, 14 or more children. Now take the Timlock family—they have 17 children. I like them. I am going to give them some of our money. There is enough for all of us, and I'm not going to be stingy."

Sometimes Hilda Graziano wishes she had never married. "It hasn't been easy," she said. "I'm not blaming Gus, mind you. He's tried to get work, and I've got to make the best of it. But I was happy when I was single. I was in domestic service, and I'd like to be back there now." If she wins the marathon prize, that will make her life easier.

Gus Graziano is 46, but doesn't look over 35. He looks well-fed vigorous and happy, and he wants more children.

"Some day Canada is going to be a great country among the nations," he says in a loud voice. "There will be work for everybody. Canada will need every one of my children, and I am glad to have so many of them."

A formidable contender in the stork derby is Mrs. Hilda Graziano, shown here with her eight living children. She claims to have borne nine since October 31, 1926, and her husband, Gus, says X-rays have revealed that she will give birth to twins next month.

TALK SAVES LIFE

Voice Soothes Woman Firebug

Rockland Lake, N. Y., July 21 (INS)—Mrs. Rose Crimmins, 80-year-old widow, today gave thanks for the gentle voice with which she has soothed and solaced unfortunate inmates of the Rockland State Hospital, near here.

That voice has saved her from death—her home from destruction.

Noted for her charity, Mrs. Crimmins frequently visited the hospital, bringing presents for the inmates and comforting them with kindly conversation.

She became especially fond of 65-year-old Mrs. Mary Moss, lonely and friendless. Finally, last Friday, she took Mrs. Moss home with her.

Friday and Saturday Mrs. Crimmins and her companion busied themselves with household tasks. Saturday night, Mrs. Crimmins thought her visitor was acting "queer." Sunday morning, Mrs. Crimmins entered a bedroom. Suddenly the door was slammed and locked behind her.

From outside the door, Mrs. Moss harangued her. It went on for hours with Mrs. Moss announcing with calm finality she was going to burn the house down—with Mrs. Crimmins imprisoned in the bedroom.

Mrs. Crimmins began to talk, quietly and persuasively, disregarding the sound of matches being struck outside the bedroom. She talked constantly—for 24 hours.

Late yesterday, the curiosity of a neighbor was aroused by the ceaseless monologue. She called other neighbors, and Mrs. Crimmins was released.

U.S. HUNTS LOST BRITISH SHIP

Tampa, Fla., July 21 (AP)—The United States coast guard concentrated a large fleet in the Yucaton channel and Caribbean sea today under orders to learn the fate of 22 persons aboard the missing British motor ship Nuncoa.

Preparations were guided by knowledge that the vessel's stores probably were exhausted many days ago.

Three ships of the Cuban navy joined the search. The Coast Guard boats were told to disregard territorial boundaries and carry the hunt as far south as Grand Cayman Island. The 110-foot Nuncoa left Georgetown, chief port of that island, for Tampa July 4 and was due here four or five days ago.

The vessel had full provisions for six or seven days and water to last 10 or 11 days.

Aboard the Nunoca were nine Americans, four British subjects and a crew of eight under command of Captain Moses I. Kirkconnell.

Negro Suspects Saved from Mob

Charleston, S. C., July 21 AP)—Two Negro prisoners accused of slaying a police detective were whisked safely out of Charleston by Sheriff J. M. Poulnot today after a mob of 500 persons surrounded the county jail.

Policemen and deputies armed with rifles, tear gas, clubs and riot guns were stationed at the entrance of the jail.

Hit by 2 Cars, Man Now Dying

Worcester, July 21—Crushed in an unusual accident in which he was hit by two cars at about the same time, John F. Griffin, 23, a clerk, of East Kendall street, is dying at St. Vincent Hospital.

He was struck at Lamartine and Lafayette streets. Police said the cars were operated by Rev. Jeremiah J. McCarthy, a priest at a Richdale church, and Wilson A. Felt, of Wachusett street.

MASS FUNERAL IN AUTO CRASH

While an Everett truck driver was being held on four counts of manslaughter, funeral arrangements for the four persons killed in a head-on collision in Sharon Sunday were announced today.

A mass funeral service will be held for the four persons at the Armenian Holy Trinity Church, Shawmut avenue, South End, on Thursday at 10 a. m.

The victims were Barkev Y. Attarian, 34, an attorney, and his wife, Shirley, 23, of Coolidge road, Arlington; Dickranouhy Chaplan, 40, of Boylston street, Jamaica Plain, mother of Mrs. Attarian, and Mrs. Araxy Chanian, 55, sister of Mrs. Chapian, of Circuit street, Roxbury.

The truck driver, Angelo F. Calo, 21, of East Elm street, pleaded not guilty and was held in $2000 for hearing August 4.

GREAT DROUTH BROKEN

Chicago, July 21 (US)—America's greath drouth was broken as cooling winds bearing rain to many parched areas swept over the Midwest.

Federal Forecaster J. R. Lloyd in Chicago said that the welcome relief would be continued, as a fresh mass of cold air is descending from Canada to the United States.

More than 5000 lives were taken throughout the country in the 15 days of terrific heat, which burnt up crops and caused losses exceeding a billion dollars.

GRILL SECRET SERVICE ON G-MEN PLOT

Washington, July 21 (US)—Two ranking members of the Secret Service faced their superiors for interrogation on the reported plot to undermine the Federal Bureau of Investigation by spying on the G-Men.

They are Joseph Murphy, assistant chief of the service, and Thomas J. Callaghan, agent in charge of the Chicago office of the Secret Service division.

Arriving in the city from California, in answer to an urgent summons for questioning, Murphy was closeted for a lengthy conference with W. H. McReynolds, administrative assistant to Secretary Morgenthau. Later, Callaghan was called in and the examination continued.

DATA WITHHELD

What explanation Murphy gave for the "sniping" charge against his men was withheld. Treasury officials said the entire matter is being thoroughly sifted and the conclusions will be announced when the full investigation is completed.

Grady L. Boatwright, agent in charge of the St. Paul office, is said to have told McReynolds that Murphy instructed him to inquire into the slaying of Eddie Green, Dillinger mobster, by G-men two years ago.

Callaghan was closely questioned on reports he has been engaged recently in questioning witnesses to the slaying of John Dillinger by G-men in Chicago two years ago.

SEEK DISCREDIT

Persons to whom Boatwright and Callaghan are alleged to have directed their inquiries told G-men an effort was under way by Secret Service operatives to prove that these slayings were unwarranted.

McReynolds held a lengthy long distance conversation with Secretary Morgenthau, who is on a vacation with his family, advising him of the Murphy and Callaghan versions of the case.

President Roosevelt represented as deeply interested in the progress of the investigation. This interest is interpreted to foreshadow strict disciplinary action if it is fully established that secret service operatives have been attempting to discredit J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Gales, Epidemics, Hit Quake Areas

Santiago, Chile, July 21 (AP)—Epidemics of influenza and intestinal disorders spread along the northern coast of Chile today as gales raged over areas previously wrecked by earthquakes.

Bodies were thrown out of their graves in cemeteries, and these lay exposed because of lack of funds and labor.

Heavy winds slashed across the harbor at Valparaiso, blocking shipping and damaging houses. A gale of almost tornadic proportions unroofed houses in Concepcion nd Cauquenes.

Debs Curtsy To King on Palace Lawn

LEWIS DEFIES A. F. OF L. IN "TRIAL"

Washington, July 21 (US)—John L. Lewis and representatives of the 12 member unions of the committee on industrial organization prepared to vote defiance of the American Federation of labor executive council.

The council had ordered the C. I. O. Unions to stand trial August 3 for "insurrection" in connection with their drive to organize the steel industry.

Lewis and his "rebel" unions, which will meet today for decision on the A. F. of L. order, gained new followers as strikers in Camden, N. J., appealed to them to seek investigation by the Department of Justice of strikebreakers' activities there.

U. S. INQUIRY ASKED

Strikers appealed to the C. I. O. to take up their fight to prevent interference with picketing and to ask the Justice Department to act under the new "Anti-Strikebreakers' Law," which prohibits importation of men across state lines to disturb peaceful picketers.

Strikers also asked for inquiry by the La Follette Senate committee investigating labor conditions.

Although it has been generally agreed Lewis and the C. I. O. will ignore the Federation mandate, it was reported William Green, president of the Federation, and others were hopeful the "rebels" would recede from their position and not widen the breach in the labor front.

The committee on industrial organization will take up the question of the drive for steel industry organization today, and has given assurances it will continue its campaign regardless of A. F. of L. orders.

NEW LAW PROBLEM

The Camden strikers' appeal to the C. I. O. was directed by Powers Hapgood, an organizer who was one of the scores arrested in the strike. John Brophy, director, replied:

"The C. I. O. will protest to the La Follette committee and other government agencies against violations of strikers' civil rights in Camden and illegal arrests of strikers."

Although Brophy said he would place the protests before the Department of Justice, Attorney-General Cummings has indicated he faces difficulties in enforcing the new law.

Each case necessitates thorough investigation to determine whether the strikers are engaged in "peaceful picketing" and whether the state allows picketing of any type.

Union Here Plans Stand on Labor Row

A local touch on the battle between William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers' Union, loomed here today.

It is expected that the convention of the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers Union of North America at its session today at the Parker House will take a definite stand on the current controversy.

Although Leon De Veze, president, refused to comment, it is understood that the question concerning industrial unions as opposed to craft unions will come up for debate before the convention adjourns.

The Poor Ole White House!

Washington, July 21 (US)—President Roosevelt lives in a "poor section" of the city.

The nation's most exclusive residence—The White House—is located in an area where rentals average $40 to $75 a month, a realty survey made public by the Federal Housing Administration today revealed.

Only two blocks were found in the immediate vicinity of the White House where rents average $75 to $100 per month, and none in excess of $100.

New Contender Takes Spurt Ahead In Stork Derby; Says Twins Soon Due

X-RAY BRINGS GOOD NEWS

By FRANK CHAMBERLAIN
Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Toronto, July 21—Like a dark horse in a sweepstake, Mrs. Hilde Graziano, 37-year-old Canadian mother who had seemed to have only slight chances of winning the Charles Vance Miller stork derby, suddenly took a spurt today ahead of the other contenders.

She argued that previous tabulation of her children failed to record one they had intended to name Sammy, if a boy, still-born in 1932, and announced that X-ray examination reveals that twins will be born to her next month.

CLAIMS 11 CHILDREN

"That will give me 11 children since Charles Vance Millar died in October, 1926, and it will put me in the lead for the $500,000," Mrs. Graziano declared.

This was the dark deep secret that her husband, Gus, vaguely discussed in June.

Today he said, "I haven't a doubt in the world that Hilda is the winner, and while last month I was willing to sign a compact with the other mothers, agreeing to split the money, now I will share with no one."

For the first time in the 10 years since the famous Toronto lawyer-sportsman died, leaving half a million dollars to the mother in his city who should give birth to the greatest number of children in the decade following his death, Mrs. Graziano listed the names and birth dates of her eligible children.

They are: Mike, born in December, 1926; Tony, born in October, 1927; Sara, born in August, 1928; Rosie, born in December, 1929; Mamie, born in October, 1930; Joe, born in December, 1931; un-named, stillborn in December, 1932; Sam, born in December, 1933; George, born in June 1935; add-twins expected in August, 1936.

"That will make 11, won't it?" Husband Gus chimed in, with all the assurance of a baby specialist. "Two of the nine children born in the last 10 years are dead. Seven are living. I have the registration certificates for all of them. And the doctor has told me that twins are coming."

Twins wouldn't be surprising in the Graziano family. While Mrs. Graziano herself hasn't had any double births to date, both her mother and Gus' mother had twins. Mrs. Graziano's mother has 14 children. She lives just outside Quebec City, Quebec, where French-Canadians are famous for their large families and where birth-control is almost unknown.

"My mother tells me that I must never believe in birth control," said Mrs. Graziano, today the tired-looking mother who wants to be a school teacher if she wins the $500,000. She married when she was 19, and declares, "I think girls ought to wait until they're 21 or 22 before getting married. But, of course, it's different if your man is working."

Her man, Gus, swarthy Italian market gardener, has been unemployed for five years and the family, living now in the city, has been on relief all that time. Last year they moved six times because they couldn't pay the rent, and they are again in arrears. The municipality allows them five loaves of bread and four quarts of milk a day, also $3.60 a week for groceries, but the Grazianos claim that isn't enough to keep them.

No compact to split the money appeals to Gus Graziano, now that he boasts leadership of all the other families in Toronto's strange stork marathon. He said today that if his wife wins the half million dollars, they intend to buy two cars, one for the social worker who has been kind to them in their troubled years, and one for the Grazianos. "And it will be the best car in the country," Gus guarantees. Then he's going to build a house for his family away out in the country.

HAS AMBITIONS

But Gus has the generosity born of sympathy. "All around our house I am going to build other houses," he said, "for other families where there are 12, 13, 14 or more children. Now take the Timlock family—they have 17 children. I like them. I am going to give them some of our money. There is enough for all of us, and I'm not going to be stingy."

Sometimes Hilda Graziano wishes she had never married. "It hasn't been easy," she said. "I'm not blaming Gus, mind you. He's tried to get work, and I've got to make the best of it. But I was happy when I was single. I was in domestic service, and I'd like to be back there now." If she wins the marathon prize, that will make her life easier.

Gus Graziano is 46, but doesn't look over 35. He looks well-fed vigorous and happy, and he wants more children.

"Some day Canada is going to be a great country among the nations," he says in a loud voice. "There will be work for everybody. Canada will need every one of my children, and I am glad to have so many of them."

A formidable contender in the stork derby is Mrs. Hilda Graziano, shown here with her eight living children. She claims to have borne nine since October 31, 1926, and her husband, Gus, says X-rays have revealed that she will give birth to twins next month.

TALK SAVES LIFE

Voice Soothes Woman Firebug

Rockland Lake, N. Y., July 21 (INS)—Mrs. Rose Crimmins, 80-year-old widow, today gave thanks for the gentle voice with which she has soothed and solaced unfortunate inmates of the Rockland State Hospital, near here.

That voice has saved her from death—her home from destruction.

Noted for her charity, Mrs. Crimmins frequently visited the hospital, bringing presents for the inmates and comforting them with kindly conversation.

She became especially fond of 65-year-old Mrs. Mary Moss, lonely and friendless. Finally, last Friday, she took Mrs. Moss home with her.

Friday and Saturday Mrs. Crimmins and her companion busied themselves with household tasks. Saturday night, Mrs. Crimmins thought her visitor was acting "queer." Sunday morning, Mrs. Crimmins entered a bedroom. Suddenly the door was slammed and locked behind her.

From outside the door, Mrs. Moss harangued her. It went on for hours with Mrs. Moss announcing with calm finality she was going to burn the house down—with Mrs. Crimmins imprisoned in the bedroom.

Mrs. Crimmins began to talk, quietly and persuasively, disregarding the sound of matches being struck outside the bedroom. She talked constantly—for 24 hours.

Late yesterday, the curiosity of a neighbor was aroused by the ceaseless monologue. She called other neighbors, and Mrs. Crimmins was released.

Physicians pronounced Mrs. Moss temporarily deranged, due probably to the heat and the excitement engendered by Mrs. Crimmins' kindness.

GREAT DROUTH BROKEN

Chicago, July 21 (US)—America's greath drouth was broken as cooling winds bearing rain to many parched areas swept over the Midwest.

Federal Forecaster J. R. Lloyd in Chicago said that the welcome relief would be continued, as a fresh mass of cold air is descending from Canada to the United States.

More than 5000 lives were taken throughout the country in the 15 days of terrific heat, which burnt up crops and caused losses exceeding a billion dollars.

U. S. HUNTS LOST BRITISH SHIP

Tampa, Fla., July 21 (AP)—The United States coast guard concentrated a large fleet in the Yucaton channel and Caribbean sea today under orders to learn the fate of 22 persons aboard the missing British motor ship Nuncoa.

Preparations were guided by knowledge that the vessel's stores probably were exhausted many days ago.

Three ships of the Cuban navy joined the search. The Coast Guard boats were told to disregard territorial boundaries and carry the hunt as far south as Grand Cayman Island. The 110-foot Nuncoa left Georgetown, chief port of that island, for Tampa July 4 and was due here four or five days ago.

The vessel had full provisions for six or seven days and water to last 10 or 11 days.

Aboard the Nunoca were nine Americans, four British subjects and a crew of eight under command of Captain Moses I. Kirkconnell.

Negro Suspects Saved from Mob

Charleston, S. C., July 21 AP)—Two Negro prisoners accused of slaying a police detective were whisked safely out of Charleston by Sheriff J. M. Poulnot today after a mob of 500 persons surrounded the county jail.

Policemen and deputies armed with rifles, tear gas, clubs and riot guns were stationed at the entrance of the jail.

Hit by 2 Cars, Man Now Dying

Worcester, July 21—Crushed in an unusual accident in which he was hit by two cars at about the same time, John F. Griffin, 23, a clerk, of East Kendall street, is dying at St. Vincent Hospital.

He was struck at Lamartine and Lafayette streets. Police said the cars were operated by Rev. Jeremiah J. McCarthy, a priest at a Richdale church, and Wilson A. Felt, of Wachusett street.

MASS FUNERAL IN AUTO CRASH

While an Everett truck driver was being held on four counts of manslaughter, funeral arrangements for the four persons killed in a head-on collision in Sharon Sunday were announced today.

A mass funeral service will be held for the four persons at the Armenian Holy Trinity Church, Shawmut avenue, South End, on Thursday at 10 a. m.

The victims were Barkev Y. Attarian, 34, an attorney, and his wife, Shirley, 23, of Coolidge road, Arlington; Dickranouhy Chapian, 40, of Boylston street, Jamaica Plain, mother of Mrs. Attarian, and Mrs. Araxy Chanian, 55, sister of Mrs. Chapian, of Circuit street, Roxbury.

The truck driver, Angelo F. Calo, 21, of East Elm street, pleaded not guilty and was held in $2000 for hearing August 4.

GRILL SECRET SERVICE ON G-MEN PLOT

Washington, July 21 (US)—Two ranking members of the Secret Service faced their superiors for interrogation on the reported plot to undermine the Federal Bureau of Investigation by spying on the G-Men.

They are Joseph Murphy, assistant chief of the service, and Thomas J. Callaghan, agent in charge of the Chicago office of the Secret Service division.

Arriving in the city from California, in answer to an urgent summons for questioning, Murphy was closeted for a lengthy conference with W. H. McReynolds, administrative assistant to Secretary Morgenthau. Later, Callaghan was called in and the examination continued.

DATA WITHHELD

What explanation Murphy gave for the "sniping" charge against his men was withheld. Treasury officials said the entire matter is being thoroughly sifted and the conclusions will be announced when the full investigation is completed.

Grady L. Boatwright, agent in charge of the St. Paul office, is said to have told McReynolds that Murphy instructed him to inquire into the slaying of Eddie Green, Dillinger mobster, by G-men two years ago.

Callaghan was closely questioned on reports he has been engaged recently in questioning witnesses to the slaying of John Dillinger by G-men in Chicago two years ago.

SEEK DISCREDIT

Persons to whom Boatwright and Callaghan are alleged to have directed their inquiries told G-men an effort was under way by Secret Service operatives to prove that these slayings were unwarranted.

McReynolds held a lengthy long distance conversation with Secretary Morgenthau, who is on a vacation with his family, advising him of the Murphy and Callaghan versions of the case.

President Roosevelt represented as deeply interested in the progress of the investigation. This interest is interpreted to foreshadow strict disciplinary action if it is fully established that secret service operatives have been attempting to discredit J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Gales, Epidemics, Hit Quake Areas

Santiago, Chile, July 21 (AP)—Epidemics of influenza and intestinal disorders spread along the northern coast of Chile today as gales raged over areas previously wrecked by earthquakes.

Bodies were thrown out of their graves in cemeteries, and these lay exposed because of lack of funds and labor.

Heavy winds slashed across the harbor at Valparaiso, blocking shipping and damaging houses. A gale of almost tornadic proportions unroofed houses in Concepcion nd Cauquenes.

SPANISH TROOPS IN BATTLE WITH ADVANCING REBELS

nounced several hundred rebel officers are being held prisoners. Most of them were believed captured in the Montana barracks' siege, however, rather than in today's disturbance.

REBEL OFFICERS SUICIDES

Seventeen Spanish army officers were added today to the mounting death-toll in Spain's civil war—but they died by their own hands.

Loyal troops entering the Montana barracks following surrender of rebel occupants after a four-hour siege found the bodies.

Each had a bullet hole in the head, and army pistols lay by their sides. It was apparent they committed suicide rather than surrender when they saw their cause was lost.

Government Troops Battle Rebels Near French Border

(Copyright, 1936, the Associated Press)

Irun, Spain, July 21 — Spanish popular front leaders reported today their forces were fighting advance troops from a column of rebels at Vera, 12 miles from Irun, at the French frontier.

Leftist automobiles, flying red flags, were bringing back wounded.

The popular front leaders said they had disarmed 65 rebels and imprisoned them in an iron foundry at Vera. They blew up a bridge at Endarlaza.

All able-bodied citizens, using whatever weapons they could find, were called to assemble here to defend this border town against 4000 rebel troops reported marching toward the south.

Leaders of the peasant-worker army said they were calling on all men of the north border countryside to fight against the army rebels.

Spanish frontier guards said the rebel column was expected to strike both Irun and San Sebastian, 10 miles away.

SAN SEBASTIAN BATTLE

There already has been bitter fighting in the streets of San Sebastian, where Ambassador Claude G. Bowers of the United States and other foreign diplomats have their summer residences.

Spanish fishermen arriving at Saint Jean De Luz, France, said more than 60 persons had been killed in San Sebastian and that 15 more had been slain in Passacen.

About 1000 loyal members of the popular front gathered at once in Irun, while many hundred others were said to be rallying in nearby towns.

The rebels advancing through the mountains were reported to be well armed as compared to the defenders.

The Leftists here tore up paving blocks for barricades and erected other shelters.

At least three Americans are known to have been in San Sebastian. They were Mrs. Louis Loder and her daughter and niece of New York.

Part of the British and American embassy staffs also were reported there. They went to San Sebastian from Madrid, July 15, for the diplomatic corps holidays.

The frontier into France was closed for the third day, while a French gunboat came up the Bidassoa river, separating Spain and France.

Madrid Rushes Troops To Quench Revolt Hotbeds

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Madrid, July 21—Spain rushed five columns of assault guards, militiamen and army officers into the provinces today to smash four hotbeds of Rightist army revolt.

The loyal forces left for Valladolid, Burgos, Zaragoza and Toledo to "attack the rebels," the official radio announced.

Syndicalists, expressing public adherence to the Lefitst government cause, announced in a radio broadcast they were ready to "fight Fascism."

NAVAL MUTINY STOPPED

Another official radio report announced the crew of the warship Jaime Primero had taken control of the ship after arresting the officers. One navy captain was killed and 14 officers and sailors wounded in the mutiny, the announcement stated.

After the fight, the ship wirelessed:

"What shall we do with the body?"

Madrid answered:

"Throw it in the sea with due honors."

The ship was en route to Tangier, Morocco, to aid the rebels, the official said.

Authorities broadcast an appeal to all farmers in Aragon to take arms against the Fascists of Zaragoza, who were said to be supporting farm owners in their refusal to give farm workers their land.

As the fighting entered the fifth day, strictly censored communications lines made impossible any definite tabulation of the great number of casualties unofficially reported.

(The highest estimate of casualties — 25,000 persons killed — was made by police officials at Hendaye, France, from refugees reports, but there was no means of checking how exact such a figure might be.)

The government announced that thousands of workers, armed from military arsenals, were marching on Seville, held by rightist rebels, in an attempt to capture the city.

BOMB SEVILLE BARRACKS

Meanwhile, aviators loyal to the Leftist government were bombing the barracks in Seville. These same aviators played a large part in forcing capitulation of rebellious garrisons in Madrid yesterday.

British Report Malaga Under Government Control

Gibraltar, July 21 (AP)—Commander J. H. MacNair wirelessed today from the Destroyer Shamrock that Malaga, to which the British warship raced yesterday to protect British subjects, was under complete control of the popular front government.

The city had been reported half razed by flames.

The first major battle between Morocco rebels and the government was expected at Algeciras this afternoon.

Spanish government warships were reported steaming to the mainland city from Tangier to bombard the town.

LA LINEA DESERTED

La Linea, near Gibraltar, was virtually deserted, with rebel troops rushing to Algeciras in lorries, heavily equipped with ammunition, rifles and machine guns. They were intent on repulsing any landing or attack by the government warships.

British flying officers were understood to be synchronizing plans today for a possible rescue of fellow citizens from strife-torn Spain.

Several Royal air force squadrons, scheduled to take off for England, received sudden orders to remain here at their posts.

It was pointed out that the British planes, armed as they always are for fighting duty, could assist in a rapid evacuation of Britons from Seville, Cadiz, Malaga, and other cities within short flying range of Gibraltar.

BRIDGES BLOWN UP

Several British officers arrived in Gibraltar among the thousands of refugees from Southern Spain who poured into the British area in steady streams.

These officers said troops of the Spanish Foreign Legion from Morocco had advanced north of La Linea despite determined opposition by loyal forces.

The British observers said the loyalists had blown up three bridges between Malaga and Marbella to block the legionnaires' advance.

Loyalists Called to Battle Rebels Near the Pyrenees

Hendaye, France, July 21 (INS)—A major clash in Spain's civil war was foreshadowed here today when deafening siren blasts in border towns signalled mobilization of all available loyal man-power.

Supporters of the so-called "popular front" government, including hundreds of civilians, were armed and drilled in anticipation of a battle with rebel forces now crossing foothills of the Pyrenees.

Scores of automobiles, hung with red banners and loaded with armed civilians, swept through Biriaton, heading for the Bidassoa River valley, where the clash is expected to take place.

Taxicabs and private cars were commandeered for the mobilization, while many armed civilians headed for the battlefield on bicycles.

A number of Red Cross ambulances were dispatched to the valley. In an effort to handicap the advancing rebels, loyal forces blew up the bridge connecting Bidassoa with Pamplona.

Control of Barcelona Transferred to Reds

Perpignan, France, July 21 (AP)—Vicious fighting in the Spanish city of Barcelona was reported today.

Advices from across the frontier said the provincial government was unable to cope with the situation and that it had transferred its powers to the Communist executive committee.

Refugees reported the headquarters of the National Confederation of Autonomous Rights in Gerona had been pillaged, and the furnishings thrown into the streets. Then the headquarters was burned.

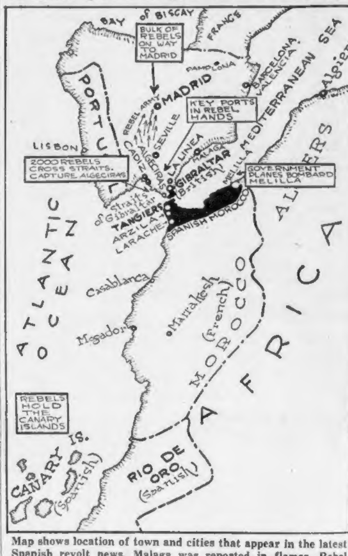

A Rightist newspaper plant also was reported fired at Gerona as well as a convent and a Catholic school at Mataro.

Colonel Moragriega, commander of the civil guard at Gerona, who at first said he would obey the army rebels and then was won over by the Republican government, was brought to Perpignan after crossing the frontier in flight.

Spanish Troops on March; Area of New Revolt

Troops again on the march!—Scenes similar to this one are being re-enacted today as the revolt which started in Spanish Morocco spread to the Spanish mainland. Heavy fighting has been reported in the city of Seville. This picture was made as Republican troops marched through Seville street to crush an earlier rebellion.

Map shows location of town and cities that appear in the latest Spanish revolt news. Malaga was reported in flames. Rebel troops have landed at Cadiz. Barcelona was bombed by government planes. Rebels now claim capture of the Canary Islands and all of Spanish Morocco.

Alfonso Hopes Peace Will Soon Be Restored

Marienbad, Czechoslovakia, July 21 (AP)—Although former King Alfonso had an airplane ready for instant [illegible] today, he said the present rebellion in Spain is not being fought for the sake of the monarchy.

"The Monarchists and Republicans," he declared, "are fighting together against the Leftist regime. The present revolutionary movement in Spain is not a fight of Monarchists or of Republicans for or against restoration (of the Bourbon throne). It is a national movement."

The deposed monarch is the guest of Count Metternich at nearby Koenigswart. He had been game hunting with Count Zamoyski on the Czech-Hungarian border until the rebellion broke out. Then he came here by private plane.

Alfonso said he hoped for Spain's "rescue from the Leftist government and from a regime of daily murders and disorders."

"My only desire," he stated, "is the inauguration of a regime of peace and order and the coming to power of a Rightist government supported by the army."

Spaniards in Paris On Mystery Flight

Paris, July 21 (AP)—Maj. Ismael Warleta De La Quintina, of the Spanish air service, arrived at Bourget airport today from Madrid, accompanied by Air Major Juan Aboal Y Avoal. They gave no explanation of their move.

MILLS ORDERED LIQUIDATED

in federal courts for several months in the hope of reorganization under section 77 B of the federal bankruptcy acts, were climaxed by Judge Sweeney after counsel for the company and its bondholders agreed on its insolvency.

Judge Edward R. Hale, counsel for Frederick H. Prince, a $225,000 bondholder, announced that his client waived rights to the question of insolvency.

DECISION DELAYED

It had been the question of insolvency which delayed final decision on what action should be taken, after Federal Master Black, a week ago, recommended to the court, after protracted hearings on a reorganization plan which fell through, that the big mill will be liquidated at once.

Judge Hale had claimed the company was solvent, citing an independent audit valuing the plant's property at $4,649,243. John L. Hall, counsel for Amoskeag, had claimed the company was insolvent, showing a company audit valuing the property at only $2,500,000.

Thus, Amoskeag Mills, which at capacity operations employed 12,000 hands, must pass into the discard, dealing a staggering blow to the industrial city of Manchester, N. H.

WARNING GIVEN

Warning that Amoskeag would probably be liquidated, however, had come several weeks ago with Black's recommendation, and civic and industrial leaders of the city have been working since that time on a plna to attract new industries to Mnchester to occupy the spacious Amoskeag mills.

The book value of the corporation, which was considerably damaged by the floods, Japanese competition and the processing tax, was given as $14,806,750.56.

USE GUNS

The latest arrest in the case was made by Sergeant Leo Hoban and Detectives Patrick J. McLaughlin and Daniel Donahue.

Acting on information gained in the past few days of their probe, the officers went to the Roxbury house during the early hours of the morning.

Gaining entry to the house, they went directly to the youth's bedroom and arrested him at gunpoint as he was trying to escape through the bedroom window.

OFFER $1000 REWARD

The Waltham city council in a session concluded at 1 a. m. unanimously approved of the offer of a $1000 reward for information leading to the capture and conviction of the slayers, as recommended by Mayor Frederick L. MacDonald.

The council, six to four, also passed a resolution asking the mayor to appoint 15 additional policemen.

These officers, according to Councillor Louis Connors, who introduced the resolution, should be distributed as follows:

Three in the Warrendale district, three in Lakeview, three in Cedarwood, one in the Bleachery section, an additional officer in the cruising car which carries only one at present; an extra traffic officer to be stationed at Hall's Corner and three men on each shift, instead of two as at present, in the Moody street section.

CITY SETTLES 420 SUITS

Civil suits that numbered 420 and totaled $1,680,000 have been settled out of court by the city for $53,454 in the first six months of this year, Corporation Counsel Henry E. Foley informed acting Mayor John I. Fitzgerald today.

Fitzgerald commended the department for the efficient manner in which the actions had been disposed of and for the savings effected by such action. Most of the actions were for falls in street, flooded cellars and similar difficulties.

Foley also reported that in the first six months of this year the law department disposed of 1281 cases arising out of disputes over non-payment of real estate taxes and brought $1,019,775 into the city treasury in that period.

Townsend Quizzed In Fund Suit

Cleveland, July 21 (INS)—Dr. Francis A. Townsend, founder of the old age pension movement, appeared at the office of Attorney Benjamin Sacharow here today to submit to questioning in connection with the suit brought by Rev. Albert J. Wright of Cleveland.

Because of the large number of persons present, the place of the hearing was transferred from Sacharow's office to a hotel suite.

The suit, filed in Common Pleas court here, asks an accounting of the Townsend organization's funds and ouster of the group's officials.

Gilmour Young, national secretary of the movement and co-defendant in the suit, also was to be questioned today.

SPANISH CHIEF BLAMES REDS FOR REVOLT

Ceuta, Spanish Morocco, July 21 (AP)—Announcement that the intensity of Communist propaganda in Spain caused the present rebellion was issued in the name of General Francisco Franco, leader of the insurrection, today.

The statement alleged that the rebel stronghold at Ceuta was attacked yesterday by a group of ships which included a Russian oil tanker on which two guns were mounted.

"The plan we have mapped out," said the statement, "is being carried through with mathematical accuracy.

"Various areas of Spain have consolidated their positions and now are preparing operations to wipe out lesser centers of Communist machinations.

"Our movement has come at the right time because the conditions aboard certain warships have sown how intense is the have shown how intense is the navy forces and how necessary it was to act swiftly and energetically as we have done.

"Civilization in western Europe would otherwise have suffered a most serious setback.

'The spirit of the troops in the Protectorate (Spanish Morocco) is splendid and it is remarkable how the native troops have offered themselves to serve the infects them.

"The threat to bombard Ceuta by certain mutinous ships has been repulsed. The populace of Ceuta viewed their presence with indifference.

"Among the ships which attacked Ceuta was a Russian oil tanker on which two guns were mounted.

"This shows once again how we have been betrayed by former Spanish governments and how they have bowed to the mandates of Moscow.

"The interests of Spain therefore are not alone at stake as our trumpet call sounds across the Straits of Gibraltar."

Wisnioski Protest Unauthorized

The protest made to Governor Curley yesterday by four members of the Polish-American Citizens' Association against his appointment of Stanley Wisnioski to the state industrial accident board, was pronounced "unauthorized" today by President Stephen Komar of the association.

Komar said the protest was made without the association's knowledge. Michael Wysocki, secretary of the Polish-American Chamber of Commerce, declared the group did not represent the Polish people.

Will Orders Wine For Pallbearers

Philadelphia, July 21 (AP)—The will of Jacob Arzheimer, probated toady, specified that "pallbearers are requested to drink 10 gallons of wine" after his funeral.

Arzheimer left an estate estimated at $8500. The will named the pallbearers and provided that $1000 be spent at the funeral.

NEW SLAYING BY BLACK CULT REVEALED

Detroit, July 21 AP)—Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea announced today that Dayton Dean, confessed Black Legion "triggerman" in the slaying May 12 of Charles A. Poole, had told of a new killing in which members of the terrorist organization shot a Negro to death "just for the hell of it" May 25, 1935, near Pinckney, Mich.

The victim, Dean said, was Silas Coleman, 43, a World War veteran. He was lured to a desolate spot on the pretext he was to collect wages due him, Dean told McCrea, and shot down for the entertainment of a Black Legion drinking party.

McCrea said he would ask warrants today charging five men with kidnaping Coleman from his home here. Since Dean said the slaying occurred in Livingston County, McCrea said charges also would be brought there.

FIVE ACCUSED

The men Dean accused of participating in the slaying are Harvey Davis, Jack Bannerman, and Ervin D. Lee, who are held for trial for the Poole slaying; Charles Rouse, awaiting trial as an accessory after the fact in the Poole case; and James Roy Lorence, who was released after questioning in the Poole slaying.

In a formal statement to McCrea, Dean said Coleman was killed because one of Dean's superiors in the Black Legion said he wanted to "see what it feels like" to shoot a Negro.

WANTED EXCITEMENT

Four members of the Black Legion and their wives were spending a week-end at a cottage near Rush Lake, in Livingston County, and the slaying was arranged to furnish "a little excitement" for the men in the party, Dean related.

The Black Legion members, he said, induced the Negro to accompany them, led him into an isolated section of marshland and opened fire. Wounded by one bullet, Coleman fled in terror, he said, but the terrorists tracked him down and emptied their guns into his body.

Coleman's body was found by a fisherman. It had been pierced by 18 bullets and was propped against a pole in the marsh.

Betty Alden on 'Beacon Hill'

Socialites Turn Out for Premiere Of New Play at Cohasset

By BETTY ALDEN

HOLLYWOOD came to Cohasset last evening . . . with all its glamour, clothes and laughter . . . and especially laughter, for the first nighters at the South Shore Players were still chuckling when they were piling into their cars, over the sallies and witticisms of Dorothy Mackaill, who was making a personal appearance in "Personal Appearance" . . .

MIMI LITTLE

Miss Mackaill's Hollywood trousseau certainly made the ladies sit up and take notice and the sparkling lines the playwright had her utter kept the bored and tired business men wide awake and clapping for more . . .

Consequently it was a gay and laughing crowd that ambled out on the lawn to catch a breath of air during the intermissions . . . each one trying to outdo the other in quoting the funniest lines of the act they had just seen . . .

The play and the actress even took Mimi Little's mind off her coming trip abroad which takes her away from these shores for three months, beginning August 1 . . . She is crowding in a lot of farewell visits with her friends before sailing and is now in Cohasset for a couple of days with Betty Titcomb, who was her hostess at the play . . . Betty wore another of her good looking evening rigs . . . a navy taffeta frock with a little fitted jacket of navy and white polka dots, and Mimi was in the black chiffon with white marquisette trimming which is so becoming to her . . . Mrs. Albert C. Titcomb, Betty's mother, wore black satin with an emerald velvet wrap . . .

Mimi is travelling about so much making last minute visits that packing and unpacking will be an old story by the time she gets around to getting her trunk ready . . . the next lap of her "farewell tour" takes her down to Watch Hill to spend a few days with Reinette Plimpton . . . and after that she will stay with her family in Concord making last minute preparations . . .

Jane Bancroft and Mary Howes, two Cohasset girls who have done very well with the players, were on our side of the footlights for a change . . . Jane, accompanied by Louise MacMillan, who looked very well in a flowered silk; and Mary with her mother, Mrs. Ernest G. Howes, and her sister, Mrs. A. O. Barker . . .

Miss Evelyn Carroll of Green Hill brought along her guests from Reading, Pa., Mrs. James Ricks and Miss Antoinette Curtis; and Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Bradley French had Mr. and Mrs. Harold Sawyer of Framingham as their guests . . .

* * *

Leslie Blake in Crimson-Navy Plaid

EVIDENTLY ALL the stags shared our opinion that Leslie Blake looked very attractive, for she was surrounded by attentive swains all the time . . . Her dress of crimson and navy plaid and her little ermine cape could have held their own on the other side of the footlights . . .

Frances Shea, who has been putting her time to good use at college ever since she made her debut, wore a dinner dress of black with a white satin tunic . . . She was escorted by Dave Scannell, and both looking forward to Ellen Gray's cocktail party this afternoon in honor of Bill Chandler's birthday . . . Bill (William H. Chandler of Pittsburgh) isn't going to lack birthday greetings even though he is far from home and attending Harvard Summer school . . . for Ellen has invited some friends to join her in drinking a toast to him . . .

Mrs. Hugh Bancroft, who is opening her home this afternoon for an exhibit and sale of the handiwork of disabled vets, was accompanied by her brother-in-law, Guy Bancroft, and others we glimpsed before the curtain rose were Joan Sargent, sister of "Freddie" Sargent, who made such a hit as one of last winter's singing debs, Mrs. Josiah Wheeler in an attractive gown of flowered print, Mrs. A. E. Mills of Scituate with her granddaughter, Hazel Angevine, who wore a party frock of turquoise moire with brilliant clips, Miss Helen Carr, Mr. and Mrs. Channing Cox, Mrs. Delano Wight, Mrs. Robert Prouty in violet chiffon, Mr. and Mrs. John Bishop, Mrs. E. Laurence Oliver, Mrs. Roland Crampton, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jones, Mary Davidson, Mrs. Frank Sawyer and Mrs. John Thayer . . .

Dance at Yacht Club on Cape

MRS. ROGER W. CONVERSE of Dedham and Converse Point, Marion, was chosen to receive the guests at the first of the summer dances at the Beverly Yacht Club in Marion last Saturday evening . . . Most of the socialite members of the Cape's summer colony made their way to the dance via one of the numerous dinner parties given all along the shore . . .

Among the crowd from Boston who enliven the yacht club's parties are Mr. and Mrs. Francis A. Harding and their attractive daughters, Louise and Dorothy, the latter's fiance, Sam Calloway, and Francis, Jr. . . . Also the Talbot Bakers and their summer, as well as winter, neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Rice of Dover and Wings Neck . . .

Another Dover family, the Walter Wyeths, have joined the Wings Neck colony . . .

EXHIBIT STIRS THRONG

Interested spectators gathered at the beautiful Holy Land exhibit in Horticultural Hall listen to Joseph Gauci, one of the exhibit's designers, explain one of the various displays. Hundreds are still flocking to the miniature drama, the proceeds from which will benefit the Boston Evening American-Boston Sunday Advertiser Christmas Basket Fund.

One of the most interested spectators that visited the Holy Land exhibit in Horticultural Hall today was Anton Hanania, of Emerson street, Newton.

Hanania, native of Palestine, born and brought up in Jerusalem, declared that the exhibition is as realistic as though one is making a personal tour of the Holy Land.

Having just returned from his birthplace, Hanania said that the Horticultural Hall exhibit is interesting and educational and an excellent piece of work had been performed in the creation of the mechanical marvel.

The Newton man was only one of the few persons who have visited and praised the exhibition and who claim the Holy Land as their birthplace.

CLOSES SUNDAY

The exhibit which was brought to this city four weeks ago by the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser for the benefit of the Christmas Basket Fund will close Sunday night.

For those planning to visit the Holy Land spectacle it is suggested that they make plans to attend as early as possible this week.

Among the comments received today include the following:

Mrs. W. Black, of 13 Highland avenue, Lynn. "Brings the Bible closer to the mind, after having seen the moving figures which act so remarkably alive."

And from Mrs. M. D. Cone, a Salvation Army worker, of 270 Washington avenue, West Haven, Conn.:

"A wonderful conception and intensely helpful. Wish everyone could see it."

Paul W. Brauer, of 85 West Newton street, expressed it as:

"A 'sermon' worth seeing."

INTERESTING ART

From Miss Eleanor Brooks, of 587 Fairview avenue, Brooklyn, N. H.:

"The most interesting piece of art I have ever seen."

And from little Peter DiMaggio, of 147 L street, South Boston:

"All children should have their parents take them to see Holy Land. The American and Advertiser are to be thanked for bringing this wonderful exhibit to Boston."

"Your exhibit is very interesting, indeed, and wish more people could see it," comments Oliver S. Chapman of 36 Rutland square. "If you come to Boston again, I would like to know it."

Miss Winnifred Burgess, a Sunday school teacher of Selma Hants, Nova Scotia:

"Workmanship magnificent. More knowledge of the Bible in a few minutes than received from hours of reading."

Mrs. E. A. Curoit of Valette street, New Orleans, La., declared it the "finest exhibition she had ever seen."

"It is certainly marvellous and a credit to the creators of this wonderful conception," said James D. Hennessey of 26 Windermere road, Dorchester. "Everyone who possibly can should visit it."

Leslie Deinstadt of the Lakeview Union Evangelical church, Waltham:

"Makes the Bible live. I hope many more of my members see it."

IMPRESSIVE KNOWLEDGE

"An almost unbelievable example of craftmanship. Vivid in its portrayal of Biblical events and locations well worth seeing," said E. F. Groden of 15 Brent street, Dorchester.

"The knowledge a person can receive from this exhibit," commented Miss Catherine Hartford of 999 Hyde Park avenue, Hyde Park, "is more impressive than reading the Scriptures many, many times. Most beautiful work anyone ever produced."

Miss Drury Sets Aug. 1 For Bridal

MRS. JAMES KILLIAN of Cambridge gave a tea recently in honor of Margaret Drury of Roslindale who becomes the bride of her son, Edward Dowd Killian, at a nine o'clock wedding on August 1 in the Church of the Holy Name in West Roxbury.

Assisting Mrs. Killian at the affair were her three daughters, Margaret, Ruth and Grace.

Miss Drury's brother, George, will give his sister in marriage, which will be followed by a reception at Longwood Towers. Mary Frances Drury will be her sister's only attendant and another brother, Theodore, will be Ensign Killian's best man.

Lieutenant John J. Shea of Squantum and Lieutenant Magennin of Cambridge are members of the usher staff which also includes Dr. Robert E. O'Doherty of Brighton and John O'Brien of Cambridge.

Miss Drury was graduated from Boston University and is a former member of the Junior Philomathsia Club.

Ensign Killian was graduated from Boston College and Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is a member of the faculty of Rindge Technical school of Cambridge.

Margaret Thomson Weds on Saturday

An attractive mid-summer wedding takes place Saturday evening at the Copley-Plaza when Margaret Thomson of Brooklins becomes the bride of Robert B. Moody of Larchmont, N. Y.

Rev. Maxwell Hamper of Portsmouth, N. H., will officiate at the wedding. Matron of honor for the affair will be Mrs. Lawrence Scoville of Melrose. The bridegroom's father, C. W. Moody of New York, will serve as his son's best man.

Miss Thomson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Thomson, attended Boston University. Mr. Moody, the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Moody of Larchmont, N. Y., prepared for Pennsylvania University at the Hackley School in New York.

The bride-elect was the honor guest at a tea held recently at the Hotel Vendome. Hostesses of the day were Mrs. Lawrence Scoville, Edythe Green and Louise Borrelli.

Guest of Honor At Tea, Bridge

Virginia Hayes of Peabody, active member of Boston Chapter of Trinity College alumnae and Junior Philomathsia, is entertaining as her guest, Marcia Munson of Medina, N. Y.

Marcia, who was a classmate of Virginia at Trinity, will be the guest of honor at a bridge and tea Virginia is having Thursday at the Salem Country Club.

Among those who will attend the affair are Betty Rohan, Pat Carroll, Peggy Howard, Margaret Reid, Ada Erlandson and Martha Hurley.

Mrs. Frank Sheerin and Mrs. James Vincent Murray, two of Virginia's sisters, will assist with the receiving.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Frank O'Donnell of Needham are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter, Maureen, at Faulkner Hospital.

Mrs. O'Donnell, who is active in Cecilian Guild and serves on the women's committee of the Boston Club of Holy Cross, will spend the rest of the season at her summer home in Scituate.

First Lady Tours To Summer Home

Portland, Me., July 21 (AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, motoring to the Roosevelt summer home at Campobello, N. B., resumed her journey today.

Mrs. Roosevelt, accompanied by her secretary, Malvina T. Scheider, stopped last night at a resort on the outskirts of Portland.

President Roosevelt is expected to reach Campobello July 28 on completion of his current cruise off Nova Scotia.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION

TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS —TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS!

This is fourth of a series detailing the records of the 17 Junior Birdmen wing champions who will compete here soon for the national model plane flying title, the William Randolph Hearst trophy and a first cash prize of $250.

Robert L. Wiehle, 18, of Washington, D. C., who will represent that city in the national model plane tournament at Franklin Field, Boston, on Tuesday, August 4, for Junior Birdmen, has won four wing championships, a feat equalled only by Edgar Fulmer, Pittsburgh.

Wiehle, a 1934 graduate of the McKinley Manual Training school, Washington, is now employed by a model aircraft company there. He was Class "B" champion of the Model Aeroplane League in 1929 and 1931 and also won the title of that league in the District of Columbia in 1933, 1934 and 1935.

Robert L. Wiehle

He moved to Los Angeles early in 1936 and as a member of that wing won the local scale model competition. Early this summer he returned to Washington, became affiliated with that wing again and won the outdoor title last month.

Wiehle holds the following records: Indoor—Baby R. O. G., 7 min. 32 sec.; stick, 13 min. 8 sec.; glider, 30 sec. and fuselage, 4 min. 4½ sec. Outdoor—Stick, 15 min. 25 sec., and fuselage, 2 min. 25 sec.

Tomorrow is the final date for entries in the Model Airplane Derby to be held between 9 a. m. and 1 p. m. next Saturday at the gymnasium of the Boys' Club of Boston, 15 Green street, Charlestown. The contest, to consist of four events, is open to all model builders of Greater Boston.

The events are a Baby R. O. G. stick, hand-paunched stick, R. O. G. cabin and stunt event. The high point scorer will receive a trophy, kits will be awarded first and second place winners in the endurance events, a special prize will be given to the member of the Bunker Hill squadron who makes the best showing and a special prize for the model, either exhibition or flying, which shows most originality in the stunt event.

Society Notes

THE YACHTSMEN who are in Newport, R. I., for the series of J-Class races, were guests at a luncheon Sunday at the Gooseberry Island Fishing Club. In the party were Harold S. Vanderbilt, who sailed his Rainbow to victory Saturday; Gerald B. Lambert, owner of the Yankee; Chandler Hovey, owner of the Weetamoe, and the officials of the New York Yacht Club who are in Newport to supervise the races. Thess were Vice-Commodore E. Townsend Irvin, George Cormack, secretary, and the race committee headed by Edmund Lang.

MRS. LEVERETT S. TUCKERMAN is general chairman of the tenth annual exhibition of the Nahant Garden Club which will be held at the Nahant Town Hall on the afternoon of Friday, August 21. This year the affair will be held for only one day, in place of the customary two days. Tea will be served on the Town Hall lawn, and several innovations will be included in the program. There will be a class for floating flowers and a class devoted exclusively to the flowers grown and arranged by husbands of members.

Mrs. Thomas G. Brown is assisting Mrs. Tuckerman with the arrangements.

Church Ceremony

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Deacon of Beachmont announce the wedding of their daughter, Miss Mabel Helen Deacon, to James William Dunnell of West Roxbury. The Rev. William Nicolas performed the ceremony in the Trinity Congregational Church in Beachmont, Saturday afternoon. A reception was held in the vestry of the church.

Miss Jeanette Beaumont of West Bridgewater, a cousin of the bride, was the maid of honor, and Miss Helen Faye and Miss Grace Bowman of Beachmont were the bridesmaids. Norman Dunnell, brother of the bridegroom, was the best man.

Following their honeymoon trip Mr. and Mrs. Dunnell will make their home in Patchogue, Long Island, New York.

'THE BOY CASTAWAYS' -:- By Jules Verne

SYNOPSIS

Fourteen boys, ranging in ages from 8 to 14, and the negro cabin boy, Moko, were about to enjoy a vacation cruise aboard the yacht, Sloughi, when, late on the night of February 14, 1860, it loses its moorings and is blown far out to sea from Auckland, New Zealand.

After more than three stormy weeks on the South Pacific Ocean, the Sloughi is tossed on a strange shore as the climax of a terrific storm on March 10, 1860.

The boys (excepting Moko) are pupils of the Chairman Boarding School, named: Gordon, an American, age 14; Briant, 13, and his young brother, Jack; Doniphan and his cousin, Cross, 13; Baxter, 13; Webb, Wilcox, Garnett, and Service, each about 12; Jenkins and Iverson, 9; and Dole and Costar, just past 8.

They are now engaged in exploring their strange haven; whether they are on an island is still a question. Early in April they are startled when they come across a man's skeleton, a cave in which he once lived, and the inscription "F.D. 1807" carved on a beech tree. They are now making an inventory of the cave's contents . . .

CHAPTER XIV

The researches continued. Other objects were discovered. Another knife with several broken blades, a drawing compass, an iron kettle, a fid, king of sailors' tools. But there were no marine instruments, no telescope, no compass, not even a [illegible] hunt game, or to defend himself against wild animals or natives.

This man certainly had been trapped, how awfully trapped was clear when Wilcox cried:

"What's this?"

"Looks like a couple of balls," suggested Service.

"To play a game with?" asked Briant, with surprise.

But he recognized immediately the use of the two round stones, which Wilcox had found. It was one of those hunting tools called "bolas," which are made by linking two balls with a cord and which the Indians of South America use. When a skilled hand throws these "bolas," they enroll themselves around the legs of the animal, paralyzing its movements and making it easy prey of the hunter.

Name on Watch

Undoubtedly the inhabitants of this cave had manufactured this tool, and also a lasso, a long leather thong used in the same way as the "bolas," but at a shorter distance.

A moment later Wilcox made another discovery. At the foot of the pallet bed he discovered a watch, hooked on to a nail in the wall.

This watch was of fine manufacture, with a double silver case in which hung a key attached by a silver chain.

"Let's see the time!" cried Service.

"The time won't tell us anything," answered Briant. "The watch probably stopped long before the poor man died."

The hinge was rusted, but Briant opened the case; the hands showed twenty-seven minutes after three.

"There's a name in it," said Doniphan. "That may help us . . ."

"You're right," answered Briant.

Engraved inside the case were the words: "Delpeuch, Saint-Malo," the name of the manufacturer, and his address.

"He was a French, one of my countrymen!" cried Briant with a little emotion.

There was no doubt left, a Frenchman had lived in this cave until death had ended his misery. Proof was added when Doniphan picked up a scribbler, its yellow pages covered with pencil lines.

Unfortunately, most of those lines were nearly unreadable. Some words, however, could be deciphered, among them these: "Francois Baudoin."

It certainly was the name of the shipwrecked man who had carved the initials on the tree. This scribbler was the daily journal of his life from the day when he was wrecked on the coast. In some decipherable fragments of sentences Briant could read:

"Duguay-Trouin," evidently the name of the wrecked ship.

At the beginning was a date; the date carved under the initials, and without doubt that of the shipwreck.

It was then 53 years since Francois Baudoin had landed on this coast! During all those years he had received no help from outside!

Now, if Francois Baudoin had not been able to go towards another point on this continent, was it not because the obstacles had been impossible to overcome?

More than ever the young boys understood the gravity of their situation. How could they ever do what a man, a sailor, used to rough work and hardened to fatigue, had been unable to accomplish?

. . . . .

Moreover, a last find was going to inform them that all attempts to leave this land would be useless.

It was a map, that Doniphan found folded in the scribbler, traced with a kind of ink, probably made with water and soot.

"Francois Baudoin must have drawn this," said Briant.

"Then," observed Wilcox, "he must have been an officer of the Duguay-Trouin, since he was able to draw a map."

Yes . . . this was a map of this country! One could immediately recognize Sloughi Bay, the reefs, the beach, the lake, the three little islands off the coast, the cliff at the edge of the little river, the forests that covered the central region!

Size of Isle

On the opposite side of the lake more forests stretched to another coast line that was bathed by the sea on all its perimeter!

And so fell those plans to go toward the east to find salvation in another direction! Briant had been right, Doniphan wrong!

The sea surrounded this land . . . . It was an island! And that is why Francois Baudoin had not been able to leave it!

The general outline of the island had been reproduced rather accurately on the map. Certainly the lengths could only have been noted by estimation of the time taken to go over them, and not by measures of trigonometry. But from what the boys already knew of the land between Sloughi Bay and the lake, the errors were not important.

The castaway had gone over all the island, since he had noted the principal geographic details and, without doubt, the "aloupe," and the causeway were his work.

The island, drawn by Francois Baudoin, was oblong and resembled an enormous butterfly with outstretched wings, narrowed in its central parts between Sloughi Bay and another bay in the east.

A third one, much more open, was in the south. A lake eighteen miles long and five miles wide was framed by forests.

This explains why the boys who had arrived on its western shore, were unable to see the other bank and why they had mistaken it for the sea. Several rivers came out of the lake, including the one that flowed by the cave, and emptied into Sloughi Bay.

The only fairly important height appeared to be the cliff at the right bank of the river. The northern region was indicated as arid and sandy, while beyond the river stretched an immense marsh which lengthened out to a pointed cape towards the south.

Long lines of dunes in the northeast and the south-east gave the coasts there an aspect different to that of Sloughi Bay.

The scale on the map showed that the island was about fifty miles in its greatest width from west to east. Its circumference probably was about a hundred and fifty miles.

This, then, was the habitation imposed on the boy castaways. Since the cave offered an excellent shelter, it would be wise to move there before winter storms demolished the schooner.

Three days had passed since the four boys had left the Sloughi. Gordon would be fearful that something had happened to them.

The boys decided that they would start back about eleven o'clock that same morning. The map indicated that the shortest way was to follow the right bank of the little river which ran from east to west.

It was about seven miles to the bay and they could get across that in a few hours.

Before going, the four young boys rendered the last duty to the French castaway.

A grave was dug at the very foot of the tree on which Francois Baudoin had carved his initials, and a wooden cross marked the place.

The boys then closed the entrance to the cave so that animals could not get inside; ate what was left of the provisions, and started along the right bank of the river.

With the idea that the river could be used to communicate between the lake and Sloughi Bay, Briant examined it carefully. He found that for three miles from the lake, the river seemed to be navigable.

About four o'clock in the afternoon, the way along the river had to be abandoned, for the right bank was cut by a large, soft quagmire. It was decided to cut across the forest.

Two miles were covered under tiring conditions. The boys cut their way across the dense undergrowth until the sun went down, but about seven o'clock they felt certain that they were lost.

It would not have been so bad to spend another night out if the provisions hadn't been exhausted.

"Let's go on," said Briant. "We must get there if we keep going west."

But by eight o'clock it was impossible to see where they were going. Where was the limit of this forest?

Rocket Signal

Suddenly a bright light showed through the trees.

"What's that?" asked Service

"A falling star, I suppose," said Wilcox.

"No, it's a rocket!" replied Briant. "It must be from the Sloughi."

"A signal from Gordon," cried Doniphan, who answered it by shooting his gun.

A second rocket went up. The boys went towards it, and three-quarters of an hour later they arrived safely at the Sloughi.

A warm welcome was given to Briant and his three companions; Gordon, Cross, Baxter, Garnet and Webb opened their arms to them, while the younger ones fell on their necks. The absence had seemed very long!

Briant, Doniphan, Wilcox and Service were so tired by their long march that the story of their experience was left for the next day.

"We are on an island," is all Briant said before going to bed.

* * *

The next morning, April 5, the older ones, Gordon, Briant, Doniphan, Baxter, Cross, Wilcox, Service, Webb, Garnet, and also Moko, got together. Briant and Doniphan told their comrades what they had discovered . . . the causeway, the remains of the "aloupe," the lake, the cave, the bones of Francois Baudoin, and the map drawn by the castaway which indicated that the Sloughi had been lost on an island.

Not a detail of the story was omitted. And all now looked over the map, fully understanding that rescue could only come from outside.

However, if the future presented itself under dark skies, if the young castaways had nothing left but to put their trust in God, the one who was the least frightened—it is necessary to insist on this point—was Gordon.

The young American had no family waiting for him in New Zealand. Therefore, with his practical, methodical, and organizing spirit, the task of founding a little colony did not frighten him. He saw an opportunity to exercise his natural taste and he bucked up his companions' morale by promising them a supportable existence if they were willing to help him.

There was nothing more to do but to get settled before bad weather made moving impracticable.

"The best plan will be to make our home in the cave," said Briant. "It's an excellent shelter."

"Is it big enough for all of us?" asked Baxter.

"No, not quite," replied Doniphan, "but I think that it could be made bigger by digging a second cavity in the walls. We have the tools . . ."

"Let us first take it just as it is," suggested Gordon.

"Even if we are a bit crowded . . ."

"And above all," added Briant, "let's go as soon as possible!"

Indeed it was urgent. As Gordon pointed out, every day the schooner was less habitable. The last rains, followed by very warm weather, had further opened the seams of the hull and the deck. The torn sails allowed air and water to penetrate inside.

There were infiltrations underneath, and the yacht listed more, while sinking visibly in a soil which had become very movable.

An equinoxial storm could destroy the Sloughi in a few hours. Therefore, it was necessary to abandon it without delay, and to demolish it methodically to save everything that might be useful, beams, planks, irons, copper, etc., in view of the settlement at French Den—the name which was given to the cave in remembrance of the French castaway.

King Edward Plans Visit to U. S.

London, July 21 (AP)—King Edward will return to London after the dedication ceremonies Sunday at Vimy Ridge, France, and leave again within a few days for the French Riviera, it was stated authoritatively today.

The monarch will cross the English Channel aboard a naval vessel escorted by three destroyers, the admiralty announced, on the trip to inaugurate the Canadian monument on that famous battlefield.

Court circles hinted the monarch is anxious to visit his Alberta ranch and probably the United States following his coronation next May.

Should he do so, he will be the first English king to visit the United States. It was regarded likely he would stop with friends on Long Island and possibly make a courtesy call on the President.

120 Trapped by Volcano

Tokyo, July 21 (INS)—The fate of 120 Japanese mountain climbers caught on the slopes of Asama-Yama when that famous volcano blasted smoke and ashes in three sudden violent eruptions today was unknown, as searching parties set out to aid them.

POISONED by SMILES

Authorities of Renown Report That Laughing—Even Bathing or Merely Stretching—Causes Illness Similar to Hay Fever!

EVERYBODY knows that people especially sensitive to dust in the air get hay fever. Many know, too, that dust may also cause asthma.

But few people realize that heat and cold, laughter, slight exercise . . . even the tiny scratches which a stiff brush makes on the skin . . . can poison them in very similar ways.

Distressing, abnormal symptoms accompany such poisoning. Exactly how it is caused—and how physicians treat stricken patients—is disclosed in an unusually informative article in The American Weekly next Sunday.

"WHEN I LOVED YOU"

By Hazel Livingston

CHAPTER 46

David was tossing pebbles into the pond again. He asked "Do you still love Lowell?"

"No. Only his memory. Do you see what I mean, David? I don't know how to say it without making it sound melodramatic. But there isn't any Lowell that I loved any more. He's gone. He's dead, but there isn't any grave. He's dead, and in his place lives someone else—someone who killed him."

It was very quiet there by the lake. The ducks had gone. The sun was setting.

"Do you suppose they ever deal out second chances, Jan?"

"No."

"But Dorathea's getting a second chance, and I know that Evelyn and Tom will find each other again. Even your ex-brother-in-law, Bennie, and his Helen."

"But there'll never be anyone for me. You see why."

"I guess you and I are the leftovers, Jan. What shall we do about it? Jump in the lake?

She got up, smiling through wet lashes. "That's a . . . I'm so fond of you, David. You're such an idiot. Come on, it's late and it's getting cold. All the nursemaids have taken the babies home, and the benches are empty. Even the little ducks have gone to bed."

He smiled, too. They walked along the hard dirt path, through the cypress trees, swinging hands.

The wind blew in from the ocean. All around them was the fragrance of wet, growing things of grass and leaves and shrubs.

"I wish I were ten years younger."

"What for? You'd have ten more years to . . ."

"Oh, we could do things together. I'm not giving up. You misunderstood if you think I'm through, Jan. I'm just waking up. I spent half my life dreaming and then four or five years bracing myself to face a few facts. Now I've faced 'em. And before I settle down to the rocking chair and slippers I'm going to have some fun."

Bridal Set

"Doing what?"

"Oh, doing the things I always wanted to do and never got around to. For one thing I'm going to move out of that old lady's home, the club, and have a real home. You wouldn't like to get married would you Jan, and darn my socks and so on?"

"I'd adore it. Name the day."

"It's the bride who names the day."

"Tomorrow or the next day. Just as soon as I can get mother off to New York. You don't mind stopping in New York on our honeymoon do you darling? Because I'd like to see father. After all, he's the only father I ever had and I've been terribly fond of him all my life, even though I haven't seen him in five years. Just a little weakness on my part. I'm sentimental that way."

"I consider that a splendid idea, dear. Would you also like to visit your sister in Manila?"

"Now that you mentioned it, I think that's a splendid idea, too. Of course it doesn't mean so much to me, but could we visit the Lyons in Richmond?"

"Well visit all our relatives" he assured her gravely. "Including my sister in Los Angeles, and my brother in Washington."

They had come to the car now. He unlocked it, and she climbed in.

"Well, drive me home," she said presently. "Mother will be waiting. We both ought to feel better, now that we've traded the story of our lives. I do feel better, really. You're nice, David, I'm going to miss you."

"I'll miss you, too. I suppose you will go to New York to live. I imagine that's where Tom's interests will be. Unless he decides to come out here."

"You don't know mother if you think that. She won't wait. I'll bet that by the time I get in the house she'll have the old wardrobe trunk out, and by tomorrow we'll be on our way."

"Glad to go?"

"Oh, yes. To see father. I don't know what I'll do though. I can't go back to school now, even if they can afford to send me. After you've worked as I have, I mean—with all the responsibility, and having given up hope of any other life. But I'll find something, I guess. Maybe I can get a job in that publishing house, though I suppose a famous author couldn't have his daughter working there. Oh, well! Something will happen. Coming up, David?"

"No, not now, Jan. Perhaps I'll come later. There'll be things I can do to help. Packing the trunks and things."

"I'll tell mother. Thanks for the ride and the consolation and everything."

He watched her run up the garden path.

"Jan!"

With her hand on the doornob, she turned. He'd gotten out of the car again, was coming up the path, between the marigolds.

"Yes?"

"Wait—wait a minute. Jan—I wasn't joking this afternoon. Funny, isn't it? I meant it! Every word of it. Oh, don't say a thing—don't say anything! You can think up something pleasant —some nice way to put it, later. I just wanted you to know, that's all. Give you something to laugh at after a hard day!"

He ran back to the car, started it, drove away.

Jan stood, looked after him.

The door opened from above. Evelyn shouted, "Jan! Hurry!"

Jan came upstairs. Evelyn was in the old black satin pajamas she had when she came west, five years ago. Her hair was tumbled around her flushed, young face. She was the old Evelyn, the Evelyn that Jan had almost forgotten. The bloom had come back. The warmth to her lips, the color to her cheeks, the sparkle to her eye.

"I've talked to your father! I called him and then he called me back four times. From New York. Oh, you just wouldn't believe it. He's had the most exciting adventures, and the book is going into its third edition already, and it will be five weeks till publication date.

"Poor Tom! He's almost mad with delight. He thought I wouldn't want to come back to him. The poor darling thought I came West to get a divorce! He actually thought I was married again. Can you imagi... that? Me, married to somebody else! I told him he must be crazy, Jan, he's going to meet us in Chicago. He wanted me to fly, but I told him no, on account of the trunks. We're leaving tomorrow night. I don't know how we'll do it, but we will.

"I called Peter and he said he'd manage—with the house you know, and he was really quite nice. I feel awfully sorry for Peter and Caroline. You can see she's discontented, and I know that Peter never really had a happy moment with that Miss Dunne of his. Living a life like that? After all, marriage means more in the—Jan! Aren't you listening?"

"Oh, yes—of course!"

"Well, I should hope so. News like this. What are you mooning out the window at? It's too dark to see anything anyway."

"I was thinking."

"I suppose there's plenty to think of, at that. Of course, I knew in my heart that this would come. Other people said he was dead, or he'd never come back, but I always knew . . . I wish you'd brought David up. He could have helped with the trunks. The wardrobe one is in the hall closet and I need a man to help. Call him, will you, Jan? Maybe he's at the club."

Jan went to the telephone.

"What did he say, can he come?" Evelyn shouted.

Jan raised her hand, to signal she was listening. Evelyn came into the hall to listen, too.

Jan said, "No. I couldn't. It's too soon! I couldn't possibly go tomorrow—"

"Indeed you can!" Evelyn said. "And you most certainly will. Never mind what he says. Just tell him about the trunks!"

"But I'm going to New York tomorrow night—with mother!"

Humph! I should think you were! Evelyn said to herself.

"But I have to, David. I really do. And besides the other idea is so CRAZY! What? Oh, I didn't mean THAT! I wasn't joking, either, the joke's on you! But I mean, practically . . . But I've got to have time to get used to it, and besides I want to see father . . . Oh, a month—a couple of weeks! DAVID! David, mother is here, having a fit because you haven't said anything about the trunks. All right, I'll tell her. Yes. Yes. I do. I really do! Oh, I mean it. But I must go—mother's waiting. Goodbye!"

"What's the matter with him?" Evelyn wanted to know: "When you WANT to talk to him over the telephone he won't say more than ten words, and there he goes on about nothing. What was he talking about? Sounded like perfect nonsense to me."

Jan's face was turned. She laughed. "Oh, he was just proposing to me. Now that everyone else in the family is taken care of, he thinks I ought to get married, too."

Evelyn laughed. "And what did you say?"

Happy at Last

"Didn't you hear me accept?"

"Oh, is that what you were doing? Well there's no time for fooling now. How I'm ever going to get everything packed in one day. . . . Come, help me get the things out of the hall closet, will you, Jan? I've got so many to do I hardly know where to start in. But I don't care. I'm so happy! I'm happy! You don't understand. You're just a child—"

"Maybe," Jan said. Her face was alight. Evelyn, looking up suddenly, was surprised at the loveliness of it. She stood a little wistful, her arms full of old clothes, looking at her plain daughter.

She thought, I'm getting sentimental. Happiness does it to you. I can't help it. I do think Jan's getting pretty!

Aloud she said, "That suit looks well on you. It—does make a difference. It pays to get something good, Jan that. And all joking aside, you could do worse than think of David. He's a confirmed old bachelor, but he always did like you, and a clever mother can work wonders sometimes, No! Don't say anything, I know more about this world that you do. You'll see I'm right some day. Just keep quiet and leave everything to me!"

Satin Tunic Is Tagged

SATIN for its icy glint . . . satin for its emphasis on good points and its sliding over of those not-so-good . . . satin for the proud sophistication with which it endows you . . . and satin in the middle of the summer because it gives you a delicious change from the crackly and the crisp and the tubbable. Perhaps that is why the Fashion Congress tagged this suit-frock, modeled by Miss Barbara Jameson. At any rate, it offers you much, much more than you'd expect for "around fourteen dollars." Posed over the slender black crepe skirt is a black-and-white printed tunic with lots of back flare. And do notice the black velvet beret in quite the most ambitious size to date!

Mrs. Beeckman on Good Manners

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—We are five sisters and next month is our parents' silver wedding anniversary. We would like to have a surprise party for them, but as we have never been to an anniversary party, we don't know how to entertain. Is there any special custom, or do we entertain just as we would at an ordinary party?

2—Do we have a cake?

3—Do we invite friends of our age, or should we invite people of our parents' age?

4—What would you suggest for a gift? Should the gift be presented in front of everyone?

5—Should we have games?

6—How should we arrange the invitations? Two of us are married.

FIVE SISTERS

1—There isn't much difference between a party given to celebrate a wedding anniversary and any other party given at the same time of day. Usually this kind of party is given as a tea-party, between the hours of four and seven. This is a very convenient time for guests to come to "pay their compliments" to the guests of honor, and the foods served at that time can be inexpensive and most attractive.

2—Usually there is a cake,, and this can be the central decoration of the tea-table. Each guest is given a slice, with the dessert or as the dessert. Serve tea at one end of your tea-table, and coffee at the other end.

3—The majority of the guests should be people of your parents' age. And then ask some of your own friends whom your parents know very well and would enjoy having at their party.

4—You may, if you wish, present the gift after the guests have arrived . . . this is according to choice. The gift might be something in silver, since this is an important anniversary and the symbol is silver. But this is not necessary. Give anything that you know your mother and father will enjoy using in their home.

5—It won't be necessary to have games. The point of this significant party is to gather relatives and friends together to congratulate your mother and father and to chat with them and with each other.

6—You might divide the number of guests-to-be-invited among you, and each write that number of invitations. The invitations might begin, "My sisters and I".

Martha LEE'S Egg DISHES

By MARTHA LEE

"Eggs for economy!" "Eggs for time-saving!" "Eggs for short-cuts to satisfying dishes!" "Eggs for extenders and garnishes!" and last but not least, "Eggs to furnish nutritional excellence and balance!"

Pages and pages could be written about how good eggs are for us. Nutritionists have placed the egg next to milk as nature's most nearly perfect food.

Their contribution in the way of rich minerals and vitamins and excellent protein quality should give them that special place in the family meals which means an egg in some form every day.

Aside from all of this the homemaker enjoys using eggs because of certain unusual qualities which only the egg possesses in the way of cooking performance. The short cooking period and the low temperature needed for cooked egg excellence make them especially desirable during the warm months.

DELICATE FLAVOR

The delicate mild flavor suggests countless possibilities for combining with other foods. The distinct yellow of the yolks and the white of the egg white can further be so much in the way of color contrast or in the addition of color itself to an otherwise colorless food. It is the forearmed homemaker who is never without a supply of eggs in the refrigerator ready to be converted as if by magic into some delectable dish. And in addition, if a few are hard-cooked, ready for more magic, one is fortified for any meal emergency.

A poached egg, its yellow slightly dimmed by a thick film of white, may be poached to a softness or firmness to suit any taste. The heat for poaching eggs should be regulated so that the water does not boil but is kept at a simmering temperature. A poached egg should be firm without being rubbery in texture.

The late summer vegetables combine nicely with eggs. A poached egg placed on top of broiled or fried tomato slices, slices of fried summer squash, or even patties made of vegetable puree. A few breadcrumbs fried in butter, a bit of grated cheese, or a well-seasoned hot sauce may be a final festive touch. Poaching the eggs in a favorite cream soup, planning one egg for each service, suggests a combination which with a crisp salad furnishes a satisfying summer meal.

HARD-COOKED EGGS

Perhaps the hard-cooked egg offers the widest range of uses. The maximum of satisfaction in the way of pleasing texture and attractive yolks is guaranteed if the eggs are hard-cooked in one of two ways.

Either:

1—Pour boiling water over eggs in the pan, turn the flame very low, so low that the water just simmers, and leave the eggs in the hot water 15 to 20 minutes; or,

2—Cover the eggs with cold water, bring just to a boil and then turn the flame down so that the water just simmers. Leave the eggs in the water for 15 or 20 minutes.

Quartered lengthwise or sliced crosswise they are an addition to any salad as a major ingredient or as a garnish. Some of the yolks may be forced through a sieve for a final golden topping.

For those who like the texture of yolks a bit mealy, the addition of salad dressing, cream, chili sauce, or catsup will supply the desired moistness. Chopped parsley, chives, or young onion tops, and grated cheese will add a piquant flavor. There is no limit to the variety that the ingenious homemaker may have in stuffed eggs alone.

LUNCHEON EGG SANDWICH

Place slices of buttered toast on a flat baking pan. On these place poached, sliced, hard-cooked or stuffed egg halves. On these place thin slices of cheese. Place in hot oven or under the broiler to melt the cheese. Arrange on a hot serving plate and have ready a well-seasoned hot mushroom or tomato sauce to serve with it.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

By IDA JEAN KAIN

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Beauty is chin deep. Twin chins subtract from your charm . . . crinkled chins add to your age . . . and a chin that has merged with the throat doubles your trouble.

If your chin has gone downhill, it is because the throat muscles have fallen down on their job. The contour of the throat depends upon the large supporting muscles, and when these lose in tone, the throat line ages.

Exercise which strengthens and firms the muscular network is the primary measure in your throat beauty program. Patting and gentle slapping will help to efface the wrinkles by stimulating circulation. However, this improvement will be only temporary unless the underlying muscles are restored to vigor. All unlovely chins, whether fat or thin, need exercise, for the underlying trouble is in weak muscles.

Throat Care

Before exercising apply cream, warm oil or skin food as a lubricant. These preparations do not build up the tissues, for exercise alone can do that, but creams are valuable in softening and smoothing the skin.

Take this on your chins: Pu:e ing the tongue behind the upper teeth, with the teeth closed, push the lower jaw slightly forward and tense the framelike from the tip of the chin to the dimple in the throat. Relax gentl, Repeat this exercise three times, performing slowly and forcefully. Later, perform ten times.

In a second exercise, place the thumb under your chin where the chinline meets the throat. Maintaining a slight pressure with thumb, tilt the head over the shoulder. Alternate the sides and continue the thumb pressure while contracting and relaxing the throat muscles. Start with four times, later twelve times. Since this exercise tones the muscles along the sides of the throat, be sure to perform the exercise an equal number of times on each side.

Use of Friction

Following exercise, remove the cream with cleansing tissue and slap cold water under the chin and over the throat. Never apply hot water following throat exercise.

Friction aids in effacing surface wrinkles. With the dry palms, stroke upward with a light, zapping movement. Do not move the skin.

When exercising the throat, always relax the muscles gradually. Do each exercise regularly and perform it when you are rested. Think of moving the muscles under the skin, for it is these underlying muscles which control throat contour. Send for the leaflet, "Let's Chin Awhile," for a complete set of exercises. Enclose stamped addressed envelope.

Yours for lovelinest!

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Children Will Stay Home When Parents Make It Enjoyable

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A good way to keep your boys and girls happy at home, and give them a chance to grow up to be the kind of citizens this country needs, is to welcome their friends at your home, no matter how humble it may be.

When young people come to the house, why be sulky and surly, let their noise upset you, or object to their turning on the radio and doing a little dancing? Worst of all, why get stingy when they suggest a little supper or something to eat?

To make home unattractive is the best way imaginable to drive youngsters from the hearthstone, and have them meet undesirables on street corners or places about which you know nothing.

Team-work should be the fundamental of every home. It should be regarded as a co-operative institution in which parents and children are partners, each having his or her own rights.

Hundreds of letters come to this column from self-supporting girls and boys, who tell me they have made undesirable friends in all sorts of questionable places because they have not been free to invite young people to their homes.

A GENERAL PROBLEM

You parents who are feeling the effects of age, and suffering twinges of what is now known as arthritis but once on a time was just good old-fashioned rheumatism, are implored not to regard your homes as a hospital, a place where you can grouch and talk about your symptoms. "Organ recitals," a witty Englishwoman once called this constant whining over symptoms by people who "enjoy poor health."

The great problem of present-day parents is to keep their children at home, and to know where they spend their time when they're away from home.

The best recipe for this is to make the home as attractive as the family purse will permit — and make your children's friends welcome.

Even in middle life there are certain houses we look back to with cherished memories. They housed the homes in which we were made welcome in early youth; the homes where we had good times and were glad to spend an evening, rather than go out and seek amusement elsewhere.

The popularity of every boy and girl depends upon the home in which he or she is at liberty to receive friends. Of course it's a nuisance for middle-aged parents who want to relax in old slippers, sit under the lamp and read the evening paper or a good novel. But it's up to THEM.

Don't fuss when the girls and boys roll up the rugs, turn on the radio and dance. And don't forget to have something in the way of a little supper afterwards.

A sensible mother may do much in securing her daughter the right environment in life—not to mention the right sort of husband—by making her home a desirable meeting place for the right kind of young people.

Married Comrades

By Adele Garrison

CHAPTER 56

IT WAS only for a minute that I permitted Dicky's strictures and my father's doubt to cloud the opinion I had formed that Katie, Junior and Roderick should be told the truth concerning the coming impersonation of my father by his twin brother.

It was because my father wished nobody outside the family to suspect his absence from home upon the secret and important governmental work to which he had been called that he had planned this visit from his twin brother, whose existence I never had suspected here.

It took more than than a moiety of courage to voice an opinion counter to both my father and my husband.

But the alternative my father had proposed—to send Katie and the small boys away from the farm house for the duration of the impersonation—was unthinkable to me. I could not banish my son and his cousin, and I could not imagine the farm house without Katie at the domestic wheel.

Besides, I was thoroughly convinced that Dicky was wrong in his premises, and I knew that my father's tacit agreement with him was not based on any real knowledge of either Katie's mental processes or those of Junior and Roderick.

CLOSER TO THEM

"Will you grant me one thing?" I said to Dicky quietly. "Will you admit that I have been much more closely associated with both Katie and the boys than anyone else in the family?"

"Of course," Dicky said readily.

"Then," I went on steadily, "I want you to believe me when I say that I never have known any one of the three to break a solemn promise when one is extracted from them."

"You're right in one thing when you say 'the three,'" Dicky gibed. "You're putting Katie in the kid class."

"She is very much a child in some respects," I admitted, "but she also has a great deal of native cunning, and I am sure that her keen eyes would spot the impersonation almost at once."

MADGE IS CONFIDENT

"If she did not know the truth about it, and started her 'detecatuff' stuff, we could well fear her garrulousness. But if I take her aside, tell her why your brother is here, and that your life may depend upon her discretion, I know that it would take more than the traditional wild horses to make her drop so much as a hint concerning the impersonation."

"I will stake anything I have upon this, as I will upon the discretion of the small boys once I have talked to them and taken their promise to be silent and work with me. Remember, I have dealt with all three of them in all sorts of crises, and I know. Otherwise, father, do you think for an instant I would risk the success of your plan?"

"No, I do not," my father said decidedly. "And you have convinced me of the wisdom of your course. What about you, Richard?"

My husband grinned reluctantly at me.

"She can coax the well-known birds off the equally famed bushes," he said. "She can also be depended upon to prove black is white, and red is blue, if she be permitted to argue the question long enough. I've been licked in every argument we've had since our wedding day. Who am I to think I could win one now?"

"But, Dicky—" I began, distressed.

"Shut up," he said good-humoredly, "and take what the gods are handing out to you. You've won all along the line. Don't go to looking your gift horse—that's me, and I might be called a less euphonious name—in the mouth, but get ready to turn the battery of your persuasion upon our Katie and the boys."

EXPLAINS DEPARTURE

"Then I leave with you, Margaret, the task of enlightening everybody in the house about my brother and binding them to secrecy," he said, "you will have plenty of time, for, as I told you, he will not arrive here for 48 hours. Now, about my departure tonight."

He paused, and I involuntarily clenched my fingers into the palms of my hands for this coming separation, with the hint that it might be eternal, was a horrible thing to me.

"I have arranged for two of my old associates to come here tonight in a sedan," he said. "They will come through the wood road, late, making sure that no one sees them enter the road. Have Jim on the watch for them. When they go back again, I shall be in the rear seat, but so hidden beneath blankets and parcels that nobody will dream of my presence in the sedan until I am delivered at my destination."

Luxurious Ritual of Beauty

POSED BY IDA LUPINO

Bathing With New Aids to Loveliness Assures Personal Allure

By ARLINE GOULD

Of all the rites of loveliness known to women, the most enjoyable is the leisured luxury of a beauty bath. If I had to choose just one method of acquiring personal allure I think I should choose the daily ritual of sweet scented bathing.

There is no surer way of acquiring smooth textured, satiny skin, daintiness and a luxurious sense of feminine charm.

A world famous cosmetician has recently prepared three bath marvels which turn the routine of bathing into a luscious experience. A bath with these beauty aids transforms you into a creature of loveliness, relaxed and refreshed, conscious of your haunting fragrance and feeling equal to any problem life may present.

All of which may sound like a strong statement, but if you try it once you'll see what we mean. After all, life is never any more glamorous, than our own ability to make it so. The trick, then, is to look and feel dainty, refreshed and alluring.

* * *

First there is a bath essence made in the land of Grasse from essence of fine herbs and flowers. This delicate elixir perfumes the bath, softens the water and invigorates you. Ten drops in a tubful of water dissolves all fatigue and makes you trail a subtle, sense stirring fragrance for the following 24 hours.

If you just have time for a shower, rub a few drops of the essence on your skin first and then step under the shower. The exhilaration and perfume will last. Formerly much more expensive, a new budget priced size is now available.

The second product is an herbal soap, exquisitely perfumed, in the scents of gardenia, lilac and rose. This is a grand cleansing agent, gentle yet thorough, perfected after much research by the famous beautician. It develops clouds of creamy, fragrant lather that penetrates the pores and leaves the skin moist, smooth and supple.

This soap does almost miraculous things to the skin and complexion, meeting all conditions of dryness and oiliness with beneficent effect.

* * *

Finally, there is a body sachet which is the yummiest thing we've come across for some time. It's different from dusting powder since it actually films over the body. Beautifying and protective oils make a fine chiffon veil all over the skin as contact warms the velvety powder and brings out the lovely fragrance.

An added deodorizing ingredient assures complete protection always. Many women are using this body sachet during the summer months in place of perfume because it also keeps them cool and fresh for hours, prevents that "sticky" feeling by absorbing moisture and does such grand things for the skin.

Comes in tall round shaker-top boxes of quilted satin paper in pastel shades with a generous matching lamb's wool puff.

If you would like to know the name of these lovely bath preparations and where they may be purchased, write Arline Gould, Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Or telephone Liberty 4000.

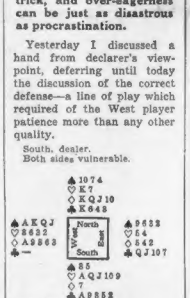

Bridge

Acquire Patience

It does not pay to be too hasty at the Bridge table. In hands which are not "pianolas" there is only one right time to take a trick, and over-eagerness can be just as disastrous as procrastination.

Yesterday I discussed a hand from declarer's viewpoint, deferring until today the discussion of the correct defense—a line of play which required of the West player patience more than any other quality.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Double	Redbl.	1 ♠
2 ♣	2 ♠	3 ♣	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

West led three rounds of spades, declarer ruffing the last. Then a diamond was led and West ducked. Declarer properly continued diamonds and, as I related yesterday, West made what was apparently a very reasonable play. He took the Ace of diamonds and led the last spade, hoping declarer could not re-enter his hand without losing a trump trick.

But that is where patience and analysis would have repaid West. South's ruff with the nine of hearts marked him with the A-Q-J-10 of trumps. West should have realized that South could and would return to his hand with a trump after ruffing the spade in the dummy.

Nothing could be done if declarer had the A-Q or A-J of clubs. But if his clubs were no better than Ace-10, only a little self-control was needed to stop the game. West should have ducked the second diamond!

Then declarer would be helpless. For the natural continuation of the diamonds would permit West to win and return the suit. And East would ruff—thus either winning the trick or establishing a trump trick for West.

Fashion Flash

To foil the summer sun, you may have an enormous hat of multi-color woven raffia, with a high peaked crown and a brim as big around as a cartwheel, with bright tassel trimmings and strings to tie beneath the chin.

There is a wide raffia belt to match, for wear with your swim suit or beach costume. It's woven in crude peasant fashion and fastens with bamboo sticks.

If you're a raffia fan you may go still further in the ensemble idea and have natural color or vivid raffia sandals with cork soles and match your hat with a huge raffia beach bag.

Raffia belts also are shown for wear with spectator sports and street dresses for summer. They are brightly dyed, guaranteed not to fade or rub off on your white frocks and they provide an effective splash of color for a hot-weather costume.

Dangers of Hookworm

By ROYAL COPELAND, M. D.

NOWADAYS we rarely hear of hookworm. Of course, the disease still exists. But it prevails only in those sections where there is a lack of personal hygiene, with general carelessness in sanitation.

At one time more than 30 per cent of the school children in the southern part of the United States had this disease.

Children, and adults, too, if they walk about barefooted, come in contact with the hookworm and are prone to contract the disease. For this reason the first measure taken in the campaign against this ailment was to enforce the wearing of shoes, particularly in the rural sections.

The disease is traced to the attacks of small worms. These enter the body through the skin. They burrow through the tissues and ultimately get into the blood. Then they are carried to the intestines.

Once the worms reach the intestine they rapidly multiply in number. It has been estimated that the sufferer may harbor as many as a thousand worms. The victim loses weight, tires easily and suffers from anemia, as well as many digestive disturbances.

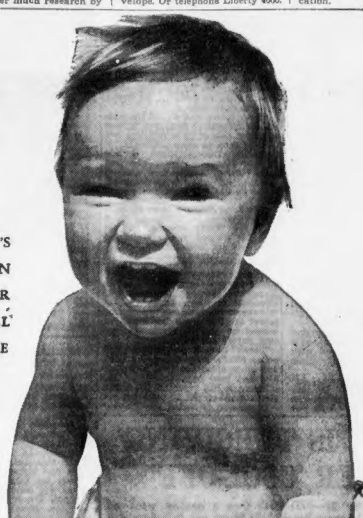

The hookworm disease patient is often accused of being lazy. In reality he is suffering the effects of the parasite which is sapping all of his nutrition and strength.

CRAVE DIRT, HAIR

A characteristic sign of the disorder is a peculiar craving for dirt, clay, hair, resin and chalk. The victim actually eats these indigestible things. This is a sign that should never be overlooked. Such abnormal persons should have a careful examination of the stools for the detection of the parasites.

The hookworm is a round, long, tapering worm. It varies in size from one-half to three-quarters of an inch in length. When it becomes lodged in the intestines it rapidly multiplies, as I have said, and will persist for years unless destroyed by special medication.

11 SLOT MACHINES PAY RACKETEER $40 EACH WEEKLY

POLICE PAID OFF AT HAMPSTEAD, N. H.

"LITTLE GUYS" FORCED OUT

(This is the third in a series of articles revealing the amazing spread of the slot machine racket in New England, a racket which gives the operators some $4,160,000 annually).

One can have a very nice time and meet some very interesting people in Hampstead, N. H.—provided he moves into the right set and moves in the right way, through the introduction of a racketeer.

For instance, a person may meet a number of police officials from various parts of the state and from Maine as well.

Police officers are nice to know sometimes in a tight place but everything is pleasant and jolly at Hampstead in a police way, because this is the town to which they come to be paid off in the slot machine racket

The investigator for the Boston evening American used his own methods for obtaining entrance into the inner circles at Hampstead, methods which he does not care to reveal, and from one of the largest of the slot machine operators he was given the racketeer's own idea of his racket

This racketeer has a complete monopoly in some of the choicer sections, and he has 11 machines on location in the Hampstead territory, bringing in an average of about $40 a machine each week

SPEAKEASY QUARTERS

One spot in Hampstead is the meeting place for the racketeers along the Massachusetts - New Hampshire border

This certain racketeer, who will be referred to as "Stevie," because that is not his name, makes his headquarters here during the summer.

The place is also a speakeasy, the proprietor explaining with a grin that the summer season is so short it isn't worth while taking out a license and shearing just so much off the profits

Meals are served here, and there are rooms, but there is no open display of liquor at the tables of diners. Drinks are either served in guest rooms or in a separate assembly room—or taproom if you will.

There are three slot machines and one pin game in the main dining room, however. These vary from the horse race machine to the regular double jackpot. The play here is about $125 a week on the machines.

"Stevie," needless to say, did not realize he was talking publicly, even if indirectly, when he discussed his racket while seated in this spot and enjoying a bit of refreshment

"The slot machine racket is just beginning to get back on its feet," he said revealingly. "There are about 2000 machines in operation in and around the Massachusetts - Rhode Island state line. There are others in New Hampshire and Maine.

BOUGHT 4700 MACHINES

"A few years ago five of us in Lawrence formed a syndicate. We bought 4700 machines from the old Capone syndicate in Chicago and we were operating full blast until there was some political mixup and more than half of our machines were confiscated by the state police.

"We sent out to Chicago and bought 4000 more machines, at a total cost of $400,000 and with these we were grossing about $180,000 a week.

"These machines were set for an 80 per cent take. Of this amount we gave the location one-third and we distributed 20 per cent for our protection.

"One man took care of the whole bunch You knew who to deal with and no damn sergeants were coming around looking for a cut, like they are nowadays.

"Then we got another tough break and had to fold up, as we finally decided to split and get rid of the machines to whoever wanted them or to put our share of them out on location ourselves.

"Well, a lot of little operators each bought a few of the machines and put them on location in border towns. These little operators got in by offering the merchants a fifty per cent deal and by setting the machines for only a 65 per cent take

"This naturally forced the bigger operators to scale down and meet the smaller operators' figures if they wanted to hold their locations without nudging somebody."

Gradually, however, according to "Stevie," the larger operators began to put the pressure on the merchants who were trading with the small operators

HIJACKINGS BEGUN

Hijackings began and state police reports were in receipt of anonymous tips that a certain merchant (one who dealt with a small operator) had a slot machine on his premises and this was very illegal and immoral

One merchant in Salem, N. H. was somewhat obdurate, however, and it was found necessary to take steps against him. "Stevie" revealed. The merchant received a telephone call one day, with a "tip that state police were headed for town. The merchant was advised to hide his slot machine.

He lost no time. Picking up the machines, he placed them in his car and was about to drive away when two men in another car drew up to the curb

The strangers asked for the machines, and when the merchant said he did not have them he was slugged and left lying on the pavement. When he came to, he found his machines were gone

The operator who owned the machines thought at first that it was merely a case of plain robbery, but he was soon to learn different.

Several other locations of his in New Hampshire were hijacked in a similar manner and one the machines showed up later on a location of an opposition operator

The same Salem merchant, having been shown the light, now deals with the larger operator whose gunmen slugged the merchant—and he is not molested

POLICE CHIEF LINKED

It was "Stevie" who also revealed the story of the greedy New Hampshire town police chief who attempted to bargain with the racketeers for a weekly protection payoff of $10 a week per machine, instead of the standard 20 per cent payoff per machine

"Stevie" himself had refused this police chief's proposition, he said, and other operators told him they also had been approached by the officer and had rejected the offer, standing pat on the 20 per cent cut

It was also disclosed by "Stevie," a bit pridefully, that he has succeeded in shouldering aside one of the smaller operators, who was trying to locate some of his machines at Sunset Beach Park, N. H., and has placed two of his own machines there.

These are both double jackpot machines and they receive a large pay at the resort which has about week-end patronage, the bulk of the pleasure-seekers from Lawrence and vicinity

From his talk with the racketeer of the Hampstead police payoff slot, the investigator went to Hampton Beach, N. H., and to Salisbury Beach.

In several speakeasies he saw and watched slot machines being played and he went through Plaistead and the Arcadia Casino and witnessed them operating full blast

Two days later, however when the investigator returned with a cameraman, every "speak" was innocent of a slot machine. It was very mysterious.

Plaistead and the Casino were still operating, however. There were 50 pin-games of every type and description in this spot at Hampton Beach, and children of various ages were among those playing the machines.

These games are typical of all high-score games, with coupons being given for scores. The coupons are redeemable for gifts, but so many thousands of points are required to obtain some article, such as an ash tray or ornamental doll, that it would take some players a lifetime to win even the ash tray.

Play-ball is recorded as owned by the same men and one of its newest games is called X-Ray Poker. This is played with five rubber balls, which are rolled down a board surface toward 24 cups.

Each cup represents an ace, king, queen, jack, 10 or 9-spot. Each ball lands in a cup and if the player makes a pair he receives a coupon registering five points

The number of points scales gradually as the player shoots two pairs, three of a kind, a straight and the like. A full house pays one pack of cigarettes

There are also pin-games and dice-like games at Playland, heavily patronized by the 5000 persons in whom the management claims is engaged there in amusing themselves and hoping for gain

DERRICKS BARRED HERE

The derricks prohibited by Massachusetts law and ordered removed from Boston spots many months ago consist of an upright machine with an iron claw attached to a swinging arm.

The player manipulates the arm to whatever point he desires, deposits a nickel and the claw drops, to tighten and lift an article from the bottom of the platform. An article such as a cigarette lighter or something else far more valuable than the nickel invested

This is provided the player is successful in manipulating the arm so that it is exactly at the right point to drop over the article he desires to win

Reputable mine players of the machines are lucky if they succeed in winning one article out of 10 tries.

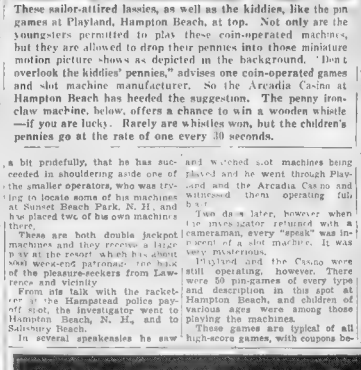

In some spots should a player finally obtain the knack of this or that other machine and be apparently on the way to a cleanup the management, as soon as the player leaves the machine makes a slight readjustment in the balance of the apparatus—and the player has to get the knack all over again

(Tomorrow, in the Boston Evening American, the third of articles on the slot machine racket will be concluded with a visit to Salisbury Beach.)

These sailor-attired lassies, as well as the kiddies, like the pin games at Playland, Hampton Beach, at top. Not only are the youngsters permitted to play these coin-operated machines, but they are allowed to drop their pennies into those miniature motion picture shows as depicted in the background. "Don't overlook the kiddies' pennies," advises one coin-operated games and slot machine manufacturer. So the Arcadia Casino at Hampton Beach has heeded the suggestion. The penny iron-claw machine, below, offers a chance to win a wooden whistle—if you are lucky. Rarely are whistles won, but the children's pennies go at the rate of one every 30 seconds.

PAUL REVERE DESK MOVED

In the form of a battered mahogany desk, the spirit of Paul Revere fled a nautical shop in State street today. One of the founders of the firm more than 150 years ago, Paul Revere left behind him the mahogany desk, a snuff box and other personal knicknacks

Barrett Davison, present proprietor of the shop, kept the desk in the back of the shop. In the last week curiosity seekers have stampeded the shop. Some of them, said Davison, insisted on sitting down at the desk and writing a letter.

But the stampede so endangered fragile and valuable nautical instruments in the shop that today for the first time in 150 years Revere's desk was moved out of Boston.

Davison said:

"For the good of its historic value I'm taking it to my home outside Boston where nobody can get at it."

POLLY IS 'FORGIVING' AFTER 'COOL-OFF'

Hollywood, July 21—(US)—Back from a cooling week-end aboard a yacht off Laguna Beach, Polly Moran was in a forgiving mood.

The comedienne said things wouldn't go too hard, she hoped, for her errant spouse, Husky Young Martin Malone.

Malone is awaiting preliminary hearing July 29 on charges growing out of his alleged announcement, while pointing a pistol at Miss Moran last Wednesday night, that he intended to slay her, and his subsequent tussle with officers who were hard put to subdue him

As far as a reconciliation is concerned, Miss Moran deposed as follows:

"Say, I wouldn't have a man around the house in this hot weather—not even if he were King Edward VIII.

"But I don't want to judge Martin too harshly and, whereas last week I fully intended to set about getting a divorce, I have decided now to wait until after his preliminary hearing before making up my mind.

"He's really a good fellow at heart, and if a couple of other men hadn't piled him with drinks, as the saying goes, things probably would have remained lovely at our little home."

3 AGED PERSONS HURT IN CRASH

Three aged persons suffered serious cuts and bruises today when the automobile in which they were riding capsized after colliding with a heavy truck at Massachusetts avenue and Marlboro street, Back Bay.

Alexander Greig, 91; James M. Greig, 62, and Mrs. Elva Greig, 65, all of 160 Washington street, Wilthrop, were the victims. Removed to City Hospital, they were held for further treatment.

Eli Weinberg of 239 Beaver street, Dorchester, operator of the truck, escaped injury.

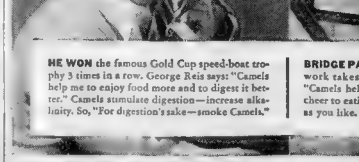

Traffic on Massachusetts avenue was tied up for more than a half hour before the demolished sedan was hauled away.

Police Lock Up Fawn in Cell

Rochester, N. H., July 21—Hardened police officers here have gone soft about an occupant of one of the cells in headquarters today.

The new occupant is a tiny fawn, brought here after being struck by an autoist near Farmington.

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

Last week, one of the two movie houses in our neighboring metropolis plastered Rockport with posters advertising "Ecstasy," that foreign film which after many years finally is allowed to be shown in theaters in these parts. The family rather feared the worst, but in default of anything better we trekked over to a week-end evening performance, where a fair-sized audience of young summer people and young local people giggled blithely during one of the dullest performances I have ever seen on the screen.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

The mayor had graciously helped out the theater management by announcing that young people under 18 would not be allowed in the theater. That was supererogation. Even parents and grandparents, who presumably need more protection than our youth against the dangers of the cinema, would not have been harmed by the performance.

Story Very Simple; Not Like Hollywood

I presume you know the tale, a very simple tale. A young girl, whose father is a horse breeder, marries an elderly physician who is stern, self centred, and unloving, and is so disappointed in marriage that she leaves him. One morning she snaps out of her grief and goes horseback riding. In a bosky pond side she hangs her nighty on her horse and goes swimming in the buff.

The horse strays after a mare and is caught by a handsome young engineer, who discovers the cowering lady, gives her back her nighty and then carries her home, she having sustained a sprained ankle in the meanwhile.

Following this episode she yearns and broods. One thundery evening her nerves snap and she beats it out of the house to the engineer's hut. On her return home next morning she finds her deserted husband waiting her. She refuses to return to him, and plans a rendezvous with her lover that evening. In the meantime the young engineer has begged a lift from the doctor and innocently displays to him the girl bride's wedding jewel.

The doctor has a heart attack in the peasants' inn where the young couple are holding rendezvous. He shoots himself. The bride does not tell her lover who the dead man is, and runs away while the young engineer is asleep. She goes out, forever presumably, into the night.

One can see that the picture might have been jazzed up considerably in the Hollywood manner. But the foreign director was interested only in one thing, the use of very slow and complicated symbolism to point the very simple and elementary tale.

Exists Only for Sophisticated Ones

It exists only for somewhat sophisticated spectators who are well acquainted with the sexual symbolism of Freud, Jung, and company—which usually seems verey innocent indeed. The result for the average youthful audience is pretty dull and highly amusing in the wrong way.

By the time certain shots of trees blowing in the wind or fields of grain or drifting cloud were flashed on the screen for the fifth or sixth time the audience frankly dissolved in derisive laughter. Certain other shots seeking to inform the audience how to tell the birds from the flowers had much the same effect. It was just a little too complicated and symbolic for the crowd used to the Hollywood technique.

In the same way the opening shots which exhibited certain Middle European marriage customs and symbols, lifting the bride over the threshold the wrong foot first, the latchkey that will not fit the lock, the withering wedding bouquet, the disordered kitchen—most of this without a word of dialogue or explanation—went rather over the heads of the audience.

"Hot Stuff" Turns Out To Be Pretty Dull

One could make a guess where the cuts had occurred. But, frankly I suspect the film left our local audience in a kind of merry bewilderment and open disappointment. They had come for hot stuff and the hot stuff had turned out to be cold and long-drawn out and pretty dull.

It is the old story of censoring "Jurgen," for instance. The highbrow stuff and the delicate symbolism seldom has any harmful influence. It is the frank and vulgar Hollywood treatment, with all the i's dotted and all the t's crossed, with full dialogue as outspoken as the law allows, which does the mischief so far as the youthful public is concerned.

COOPER Pawn in Film BATTLE

"STAR RAIDING" BIG ISSUE

Hollywood, July 21 (AP)—Lean, broad-shouldered Gary Cooper, bearing a $4,000,000 price tag, became the pawn of a battle between two major movie studios today.

The issue was "star raiding."

While the suave Cooper—graduated from a $1.50-a-day cowboy extra to a top-flight star—vacationed aboard a yacht his employers for 10 years, Paramount Productions, fired the opening gun with a federal court suit.

Paramount claimed full credit for developing him into a powerful box-office attraction from "an inexperienced player—awkward, shy and bashful," only to see him hired away by producer Samuel Goldwyn.

The complaint asked $4,000,000 actual damages and punitive damages of $1,000,000 from Goldwyn, charging he thwarted Paramount's attempt to sign Cooper to a new four-year contract and placed him under the Goldwyn banner instead

Plan Attack

Indicating he was ready to launch a counter-offensive, shrewd Showman Goldwyn admitted he had acquired Cooper's services and added:

"I haven't seen the complaint, but I do not understand any theory on which any such claim can be based."

Said Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board of Paramount:

"Such conduct as that alleged in our complaint is not only a breach of good morals and ethics, but is a violation of the law."

Cooper's Paramount contract expires next December 4, the complaint sets forth, and he had agreed last January to continue with the company another four years when Goldwyn persuaded him to break off such negotiations.

"Any differences between Paramount and Samuel Goldwyn we cannot understand," said Jack Moss, Cooper's manager. "It is true, of course, that we negotiated the contract with Goldwyn."

Cooper's salary with Paramount is said to exceed $100,000 a picture, a far cry financially from the early 1920's when he arrived in Los Angeles from Helena, Mont., and vainly sought a job as a newspaper cartoonist.

Goldwyn gave him his first screen break, choosing him from the ranks for a role in "The Winning of Barbara Worth."

Hollywood is no longer gun-shy when the legal cannonading starts over "star raiding." Perhaps the biggest raid in cinema history was self-engineered, when Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Charles Chaplin and D. W. Griffith broke with the then major companies and organized their own producing corporation—United Artists.

More recent was the occasion when First National signed Ruth Chatterton and William Powell, at fat salary increases, while their former employer, Paramount, had to look for new star material.

Youth Shoots Self With Old Pistol

Examining a police pistol he found in the attic of the home of Sergeant William Brown, Metropolitan police, in Huntington avenue, Back Bay, Leslie Richardson, 17, shot himself in the jaw and is in a serious condition at City Hospital today.

Sergeant Brown is on vacation and Richardson's brother, John, 16, has been taking care of the premises. Leslie and another youth were visiting there when the accident occurred. The home of the Richardson boys is in Frazier street, Hyde Park

Truck Crash Cuts Off Putnam Power

Putnam, Ct, July 21 (AP)—A Taunton, Mass., express truck crashed into a pole in North Grosvenordale today, virtually paralyzing the section's public utilities and highways for several hours.

The telephone and electric power lines on the pole were rendered useless by the accident, caused when a six-ton truck and trailer, operated by John L. Hunt of Taunton, left the main highway.

ANN MARSTERS IN HOLLYWOOD

Anne Nagel, Local Girl, Climbing Upward In Films

Ann Marsters, feature writer for the Boston Evening American, is back in Boston after a long visit to Hollywood. There she gathered and wrote the series, "Ann Marsters in Hollywood." This is the 44th story of the series.

By ANN MARSTERS

Her real name doesn't mean a thing in Hollywood. But in Boston, where she grew up and went to school, she was known as "Anna Dolan."

In Hollywood she is Anne Nagel and with a nice Warner Brothers' contract, she has every promise of a shining future as a movie star.

Her home in Boston was at 236 Jamaicaway, and she took a nursing course at Notre Dame Academy in the Fenway. She was planning at that time to be a nurse or a kindergarten teacher

"That was because I liked children," she said. "And yet—my great and secret ambition was to act."

Anne Interviewed In "Green Room"

Anne began the story of her life in "The Green Room"—a restaurant at Warner Brothers, reserved for the stars and featured players and executives.

She looked very pretty—refreshingly pretty—with her dark, reddish hair and her very blue eyes. She has a clear-eyed tranquility about her expression, and when she smiles she suddenly reminds you of Loretta Young

You couldn't imagine her wasting her beauty in a schoolroom—and Anne herself never thought it such a splendid idea either.

But, at first, she didn't tell anyone about her ambition to act. She was afraid people would laugh at her.

"I think," she said, "that I had some sort of inferiority complex about it. The movies seemed a very alluring but very far-away goal. It didn't seem possible that I could ever be a movie actress. And besides—I didn't want to give anyone an excuse to call me stage-struck.

"But finally I decided that my attitude was all wrong. I decided to be frank about my ambition and try to do something about it."

Takes Dancing Lessons in Boston

One of the first things she did, was to take dancing lessons from Pauline Mason, who then had a dancing school in Boston. Miss Mason is now the wife of "Skeets" Gallagher, and she and Anne see each other quite frequently in Hollywood.

"I also posed for various Boston commercial photographers," she went on, "and spent most of my spare time watching rehearsals of the Shubert Players."

Anne was then 16. She had completely given up the idea of becoming either a nurse or a teacher. And because she seemed so intensely interested in the theater, the Shubert Players offered her bits in "Sons o' Guns," "Countess Maritza," and "The Desert Song"

Her step-father, Curtis Nagel, helped and encouraged Anne in her career. He was a technicolor expert and producer of color shorts made in Boston and New York. Anne starred in a number of them. And when Mr. Nagel transplanted his work to Hollywood, Anne went along too.

"That was nearly four years ago," said Anne. "The movies were right at my back door, and I thought it would be easy to step right into them.

"But I had to serve my apprenticeship, as most of us do, and I was only too glad to get experience by being a mere extra player."

But gradually her roles grew bigger and better, until she attracted particular attention in "Hot Money" with Ross Alexander. Alexander was once a member of the Jewett Stock Company in Boston

She appeared with him a second time in "Loudspeaker Lowdown." In it, she competes with Glenda Farrell for Alexander's heart—and Anne wins. She sings in the picture, too—and she gives all the credit for her knowledge of music to the New England Conservatory of Music, where she studied voice for a while

Just the other day, Warner Brothers announced that Anne Nagel will have an important role in "Shrinking Violet" with Dick Purcell and little Sybil Jason.

Anne's fan mail is beginning to come in volumes, and she said that a large part of it comes from Boston.

"I think," she said, "that about every girl I went to school with has written to me.

"There are quite a few Bostonians here in Hollywood—and I think it would be fun to start some sort of a club for Boston movie actors and actresses."

Tried for Stardom Before 21st Birthday

Charter members, she said, would be Bette Davis and Mildred Law. Mildred is the daughter of Police Lieutenant Thomas McMurray. She signed a Warner contract a few weeks ago.

"It has been the dream of my life," Anne continued, "to be a recognized screen player by my 21st birthday. I'll be 21 in September, and—well, it looks as though my dream is coming true."

Another Hollywood story in Wednesday's Boston American.

She used to be "Anna Dolan" when she went to school in Boston; she's now Anne Nagel, and is becoming more and more popular in Hollywood, where she has played many important roles. And here she is displaying her new contract with Warner Brothers, where she is to have an important role in "Shrinking Violet," with Dick Purcell and Sybil Johnson.

TO BE OR NOT TO BE!

That Barrymore-Barrie Wedding

Hollywood, Cal., July 21 (AP)—Elaine Barrie's dream of an $8\frac{1}{2}$ carat diamond ring on her engagement finger was jarred today by a gruff blast from John Barrymore, 53 and frank

"I never was engaged to her," quoth the gray-haired thespian of his 21-year-old protege.

"A man can't get along with a dame like that. We're not going to be married."

But in the Barrie home in Hollywood, a few miles from Barrymore's estate, Elaine had ideas of her own today and her brown eyes were alight.

"I'm just about the happiest person," she said in dulcet tones. "The diamond ring and a golden brocade mandarin coat are to be my very own.

"I became 21 last week, and, according to an agreement, they'll be given to me."

The two valuables were Barrymore's gifts to Elaine in the [illegible] dawn of their Ariel-Caliban association in Manhattan. Much has transpired since—a cross-country chase with Barrymore evading "capture," Dolores Costello Barrymore's divorce, and the actor's recent rest cure at a Santa Barbara hospital.

COMETS Visible TONIGHT

SKY SPECTACLE TO BE SEEN

New York, July 21 (US)—With long blazing tails of fire, Peltier's comet and its newly discovered distant relative, the Kaho comet, will put on their scheduled heavenly show for sharp-eyed star gazers throughout the United States beginning tonight.

Both "shooting stars" will be visible to the unaided eye. The Kaho comet, discovered last Friday night by a Japanese amateur astronomer, Sigura Kaho, will be visible early in the evening low in the western skies.

The Peltier Comet, which has been coming closer and becoming brighter since its discovery in May, will be seen high in the northern sky.

Gets Brighter

Peltier's Comet, found by Leslie Peltier, of Delphos, Ohio, America's most famous amateur astronomer, will become brighter each day until it reaches a maximum visibility on August 4. Its distance from the earth on that date will be 16,000,000 miles.

Computations of the Kaho Comet's movements are being made today and will probably indicate whether the stellar object is brightening, like Peltier's, or fading, according to observatory officials here.

Rushing toward the earth in its orbit around the sun, the tail of Peltier's Comet on clear nights may be seen stretching across the sky in a long arch of light.

Professor William H Barton, acting head of the Hayden Planetarium, explained the probable origin of the comet spectacle:

"The tail of a comet points away from the sun as it is generated by the sunlight's pressure on the fine material in the head. Therefore when the visitor goes away from the sun the tail precedes the head—and the ancients called it a 'beard.'

"Not since the long tail of Halley's Comet stretched across the night sky in 1910 has one of these unusual visitors fired our imagination until on the night of May 14, Leslie Peltier, amateur astronomer of Delphos, O., discovered a new comet.

Will Be Closest

"This strange object is now coming toward us and is getting brighter. By the middle of the week it should be bright enough to see without a telescope, and by Aug. 4, it should be closest to us.

"It's maximum brightness is expected to be about the same as the dimmer stars of the big dipper."

Peltier's Comet at the present time, Professor Barton said, is in the constellation of Cassiopeia, the worm-shaped group sometimes known as "The Lady in the Chair."

It is low in the northeast just after dark, but by 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning is high overhead.

Laundry-Politico Missing a Month

It may be that nobody has officially notified Wong Lee that the Democratic national convention is all over and has been over for nearly a month, but Wong Lee, it was discovered today, has not returned.

In a window of his laundry shop at 99 Grove street, Melrose, is a sign which reads:

"Closed during convention in Philadelphia. Wong Lee."

Collar and cuff clients of the genial Chinese, who was elected to the Democratic state convention as a delegate pledged to State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley for Governor, but who absent-mindedly cast his vote for Attorney-General Paul A. Dever, expected Wong back late in June

But the sign is still in the window.

Soviet Fliers Pass Half-Way Mark

Moscow, July 21 (AP)—A trio of Soviet distance fliers radioed today they had reached the half-way mark in their 7000-mile attempted non-stop flight over the polar circle, passing over Tixie Bay at the north of the Lena river

They are en route to China, Siberia, from Moscow.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Marjorie McBri[illegible]

Bernard Shaw and Aldous Huxley, th[illegible] thors, have made a point of their dislı[illegible] telephone. At last the British telephone panies have turned on them. They say neither of the celebrated writers has a good telephone voice!

Speaking discretely, and with a "now, don't-quote-me" air, Boston telephone executives admit there are a few noted Bostonians whose telephone manner is distinctly unfortunate. They include howlers, hook-jigglers screamers, whisperers, mutterers and those who love to repeat a question. In the main, however, they say . . . and visitors bear them out . . . the Boston telephone voice is well above the average.

MARJORIE McBRI[illegible]E

In this city, there's an excellent trai[illegible]ng school for the "hello" girls. Nowadays most [illegible]ness firms big enough to need a switchboard tr[illegible] to catch their own and train them young. It's very important, and often affects business volume.

Ordinary telephone users may be interested in knowing what the Telephone Company's course of instruction is. The girls are told to keep [illegible] voices low, and as lilting as nature will per[illegible] . . . not to be flip, or patronizing . . . not to brea[illegible] in when another is speaking . . . to apologize [illegible]r calling a wrong number . . . to remember [illegible] user may be a little sharp because he is apt to [illegible] incarcerated in a booth hotter than a Turk[illegible]h bath

The girls find most Bostonians recognize [illegible] 'phone as one of the major conveniences of m[illegible]ern times, and try to make the best of it.

Mrs. Emmons' Voice Held Among Best

Mrs. Nathaniel Emmons, socialite, has one of the best telephone enunciations. But she'll talk over the wire only between 10 and 11 in [illegible] morning. Mrs. Malcolm Bradley French a[illegible] Mrs. Bradbury Cushing, also active socially, have fine voices over the telephone.

Eliot Wadsworth, president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, has a bell-like voice in its clarity. Other good phone presences are the happy possessions of Carl P. Dennett, banker, and Henry I. Harriman, whose major transactions in oil and timberland are negotiated over the long distance.

A few die-hards won't use the telephone at all, unless it be to call a doctor or summon the police.

"Sure they are," he replied, with spirit. "Any waters Patrick could see from the top of the mountain never drowned anybody, native or from far away."

Stamp Collector Writes of Hobbies

People who think hobbies are childish and time-killers will be interested in "My Hobby" a booklet written by Arthur H. Abbott, Boston electrical engineer. The approach is unusual. He collects stamps. He writes that if he had to abandon his profession he could live on the proceeds of his collection. Abbott urges others to take up hobbies that are potentially profitable as well as pleasant.

He was sold out before the umpire [illegible] "Batter up!"

Avery Brundage Gets Stool Pigeon Rating From Olympic Critics

BY OPENLY CONFESSING THE SHIPBOARD drinking scandal which took place lately among our Olympic boys and girls now en route for Germany, Mr.

Austen Lake

Avery Brundage, the U. S. team president, has whipped up a mess of indignation on these shores. This indignation is aimed at Mr. Brundage, who is regarded as a stool-pigeon and renegade squealer, since the U. S. journals displayed the yarn prominently as a juicy morsel of gossip

Brundage is accused of tactlessness for having washed the team's "unmentionables" in the public trough, and a portion of the news reading public is taking pen in hand to address outraged hollers to this column, which vary from simple irritation as ". . . an example of odious taste . . ." to ". . . he deserves a bust on the snoot from every right thinking person."

Yet any one who is familiar with the workings of the U. S press and the peculiarities of public opinion, will agree that Brundage was in an embarrassing spot when the incident happened As always on these Olympic junkets there were a number of high-pressure news snoopers gum-shoeing about the decks, sniffing for something to radio to their journals. They were independent of the Olympic committee, with the rating of passengers, and, seeing the Olympic kids astride bar stools in the ship's lounge, where they were belting the bottle, it seemed like a nice yarn.

CONFESSION OFFERS QUICKEST CURE

THE OFFENSE WAS NOT HEINOUS, being about the same thing that any set of modern males and females have been doing on ocean voyages since adolescence. By prompt action Brundage might have squelched the story before it reached the wireless room, appealing to the newsmen's higher ideals, or something. But he was shrewd enough to realize that the story would ultimately leak out on a much magnified scale and become something larger as rumour spread, as is always the case when scandal is stifled and allowed to fester under cover.

If Brundage [illegible] the incident on shipboard it would expand by roundabout rumour to become a grand carousal and mid-ocean orgy by the time the team arrived back at the New York docks. And he knew, too, if he published the names of the culprits they would become objects of national scorn far out of proportion to the misdemeanor. So he did the next best thing by releasing the story in skeleton form, keeping the sinners incognito and pinning the blame on an anonymous few. The sooner revealed the quicker healed.

As an example of the way this works, I have always thought the shrewdest act of Joe Cronin's career as Red Sox manager was when he hurried to telephone full details to all Boston papers last summer on the evening after Billy Werber punched Ellsworth Dahlgren on the nose in a dugout squabble. The story made brief news and died a natural death the next day. Had Cronin hidden the facts, the little tiff would have gradually progressed to "internal dissension" and "clubhouse riots," staying alive out of curiosity for the rest of the season

DISCOVERY AND WES FERRELL

A. G. VANDERBILT'S RUBBER-LEGGED race horse, Discovery, which headlines the Massachusetts Handicap at Suffolk tomorrow, is the Wesley Ferrell of the pari-mutuel ovals. Like Wes, Discovery has a champion's capabilities under a strange psychosis wrapping, being temperamental, irritable, with talents hidden beneath layers of sullen suspicion.

Which makes it just as risky to place a money b[illegible] W[illegible] steps into the box for the Red Sox at Cleveland as to place a bank note on Discovery's whiskers tomorrow. Because in [illegible] case the bettor is not wagering so much in pure physical form [illegible] the state of the mans and animal's internal chemistry, its mood [illegible] and the risk of nervous wiring being snarled. If the [illegible] satisfactory the inner harmony normal, Discovery will [illegible] from the f[illegible] and Wes will shut the Indians out. If the soul [illegible] man or the beast, is in uproar, Discovery may sulk the mile-and-sixteenth and Wes get his ears blown off.

HOOF DISEASE

BEFORE THE OLYMPIC TEAMS SAILED, a go-getter salesman from a chemical firm which makes an antidote for a fungus skin disease, asked Lawson Robertson whether any of his track and field men suffered from "athlete's foot."

"Sure, they all have athlete's foot," said Robertson jocularly. "I hope to show sixty-six cases of athletes' foot among my sixty-six men at Berlin. Not only athlete's foot but athlete's head and heart as well."

Taking his rema[illegible] salesman shipped enough samples of his cure to take care of [illegible] cases of pedal affliction, the stuff arriving "freight charges collect" which cost Robbie $3.75 of his personal cash.

YIELDING TO THE HURRICANE OF criticism which followed the Toronto Maple Leaf victory over the Boston Bruins in the Stanley Cup Series last March, the National Hockey League has dropped the two-game-total-goals system for the best-two-out-of-three . . . Unwilling to educate college football officials and have them used at bargain fees by the professional teams, Walter Okeson, international officials boss, has barred his game handlers from the commercial game next fall . . . Resolved to end goal post wreckings in the autumn, Yale has installed six-inch, tubular steel uprights sunk in 54 inches of concrete. When they were raised last week, each upright required six workmen to lift it into place . . . Tom Yawkey, Red Sox millionaire owner, is hounded by autograph hunters. But not the usual kind who are satisfied with a mere sample of penmanship on a scrap of paper. They want his name at the bottom of a bank draft. Through his Fenway Park office Tom receives bushels of begging letters, ranging from men who want $10,000 to open a garage business, to ladies wishing $100 to mend a leaky roof.

Star Performers of Equine World Who Show at Suffolk

Stand Pat, one of the keenest rivals of Discovery, arrived at Suffolk Downs this morning for a test of speed with the speediest racers on the American turf. Stand Pat is one of the field of horses that go to the post tomorrow at Suffolk Downs in the Massachusetts Handicap with a purse of $25,000 awaiting the winner.

"LOOKS O. K. TO ME," says Trainer Bub Stotler, as he gives Discovery the once over. Stotler prepped the racer at Empire City for the big race at the Downs tomorrow, and thinks his charge is fit for the test.

COOLING OFF after a workout at Suffolk Downs this morning, Discovery is walked by Jim Starkey. The A. G. Vanderbilt handicap ace came to the Downs for the $25,000 handicap tomorrow afternoon.

Discovery Rated In-Outer by Expert

VANDERBILT ENTERS 2 HORSES

By DAVE WILSON

Firethorn in the $25,000 Massachusetts Handicap.

That's my selection for the race tomorrow. Despite the presence of Discovery, Time Supply, Stand Pat and other great handicap stars, Firethorn can win and should win the mile and one-eighth classic.

Firethorn, a son of Sunbriar and Baton, is owned by Walter M. Jeffords and trained by Preston Burch, the greatest of all horse trainers, to my mind.

He defeated Discovery at Laurel last fall, and in the recent Suburban Handicap he gave Granville and Whopper a proper pasting.

Here a Month

I like him especially because he has been quartered at the East Boston track for almost a month, being prepped for this particular race by Burch. If the race were a mile and a quarter I'd tell you that Firethorn was a cinch and I'd plead with you to hock the family jewels on his ability to win.

He is a slow beginner, but comes like a stream-lined train once he starts churning over a track. This race will be a mile and one-eighth, and if Firethorn is within reach of the leaders, he's destined to pick up the marbles.

Harry Richards, who has no peer as a race rider, has been engaged to pilot the son of Sun Briar in the classic. Firethorn, under triple wraps, almost pulled the jock out of the saddle when he breezed a mile in 1:42.1 for his final workout.

Discovery may run one of his really great races, in which event he will be hard to beat. But the big horse is inconsistent. Down at the Vanderbilt stables, they used to say, "He'll win." Now they're saying, "If he runs his race he'll win."

In-and-Outer

He worked sensationally at Empire City before they shipped him, but not so long before that, he couldn't outrun a fat man in the Stars and Stripes at Arlington Park, where he finished 10th in a 12 horse race won by Stand Pat.

It is a confession of weakness, too, that Good Gamble will also be a Vanderbilt starter, for in the old days he needed no help from anybody.

The big horse may have one of his good days, but now those days are coming few and far between. He will be lugging 136 pounds, as compared to the 122 which Firethorn will carry, and I doubt very seriously that Discovery, even at the top of his form, can stand off such a stretch running fool as Firethorn with such a distribution in weights.

Time Supply should be right in the thick of things. "Sonny" Workman is coming on to ride him. He is nicely weighted at 121 pounds. He has worked well for this race, and his final was a mile and an eighth in 1:53.4 handily.

Won Saturday

He beat Discovery twice last year, was runner-up to Top Row in the $100,000 race at Santa Anita in February, and a week ago Saturday won a mile and one-sixteenth tune-up in smooth, workman-like fashion.

So there are my selections for the Massachusetts Handicap: 1—Firethorn, 2—Discovery, 3—Time Supply.

Adams Gets the News

By JACK CONWAY

SPEAKING OF NEWS: Charley Adams, who did more than anybody else to reorganize the Bees, didn't know Bill McKechnie's club was in the midst of a wild winning surge until late last week when he came out of the New Brunswick woods following a four weeks' fishing trip.

There was not any telephone at Adams' camp, and it was not equipped with a radio.

Mr. Boston

Charley got a real thrill when he found the Bees were making a stout hearted drive for the first division despite the loss of star players by injuries.

Adams was the leader in the fight to keep Bill McKechnie as manager of the Braves when Babe Ruth was brought to Boston a year ago last Spring. He also recommended McKechnie highly to Bob Quinn when the latter took control of the club. McKechnie has been a powerful factor in the upward climb of the Bees.

• • •

Adams, now president of Suffolk Downs, witnessed Monday's races and was pleased when told that 36 per cent. of the favorites have been winning at the East Boston track.

• • •

Discovery

DISCOVERY has got the handicappers guessing. The Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt thoroughbred has been so inconsistent in his racing that the handicappers are doubtful of the kind of race he will turn in at Suffolk Downs in the $25,000 Massachusetts Handicap tomorrow.

• • •

Discovery won the feature race at the summer meeting at the East Boston track last year by 15 lengths. He got off to a poor start, overlook his field entering the middle of the backstretch, stepped into a fog bank, and when next seen coming down the stretch in front of the grandstand was all by himself. At the fall meeting at Suffolk Downs, Discovery was defeated by little Top Row in a furious stretch battle.

• • •

Discovery was badly beaten in his last start, which was in Chicago, but previously won a $10,000 race in Brooklyn. Bud Stotler is hoping that Discovery will have one of his good days tomorrow and show his heels to the classy field that will oppose him.

• • •

With a good break in the weather, a crowd of 30,000 is expected to turn out for the Massachusetts Handicap. Such a gathering would equal the attendance figures for the two biggest Saturdays at Suffolk Downs.

• • •

Discovery will carry 126 pounds which should not be too much of a weight burden for him.

• • •

Firethorn, Time Supply and Clang are expected to be in the contention from the start.

• • •

It will be the best field to compete in a major race in New England this year and every starter has a chance to win. In races like the Massachusetts Handicap, owners do not start horses unless they believe they have at least an outside chance to finish first.

• • •

Advising Anna, with a handsome payoff of $72, once defeated Discovery at Rockingham, which proves what can happen in a horse race.

• • •

Jack Sharkey

THE REAL reason why Jack Sharkey staged a ring comeback was because he felt he could lick Joe Louis. He saw Louis stop Max Baer in New York, and stated after that contest the "Brown Bomber" would be easy to hit with left hooks to the jaw, and short right-hand punches to the chin.

• • •

Sharkey was disappointed that Max Schmeling got the first crack at Louis, but he is now anxious to prove he also can lick the "Brown Bomber."

• • •

Sharkey displayed better boxing form as he came up off the floor to defeat Phil Brubaker than Schmeling did as he kayoed Louis.

• • •

Sharkey still believes he has Max Schmeling's number and insists he will beat the German heavyweight if they meet again in the ring. Before the Louis bout, Der Max told me (by) Sharkey gave him the worst licking he ever received in their first bout, which was won by Schmeling on a foul in the fourth round. Max frankly admitted that Sharkey hit him with about everything but the ring posts during the first three rounds.

The American Wrestling Association is expected to render a decision tomorrow on whether it will recognize Yvon Robert as world's heavyweight wrestling champion as a result of the decision he received over Danno O'Mahony in Montreal last week.

DRIVE On for 3rd PLACE

REDS SLATED FOR 4 GAMES

By Joe Cashman

Will McKechnie, the guy who wrote 'he book, brought his bedazzling Bees back home for a 12-day stay today, pointed out third place, four games away, and told them to go get it.

Just like that, without mention of the fifth and fourth rungs they must pass to reach the goal.

But that omission is easily understood.

To a gang which already sports three more victories than it hung up all last season, is miles removed from the basement berth it was supposed to occupy permanently and has more hustle and fight than any two rivals combined, soaring over two notches on the ladder rates among minor matters.

Waltzing merrily into their Hive after a surprisingly successful road jaunt, during which they gained eight verdicts in 15 starts, the Bees first take on the fifth-place Reds in a four-game series. Then they are booked for three-game engagements with the Cardinals, Pirates and Cubs in that order.

According to the reports of our local operatives, the boys and girls hereabouts have finally awakened to the fact that no club in the majors plays smarter or more interesting ball than these same Bees and this home stand will see McKechnie's wonder workers receive the support and adulation which the fans, for some unfathomable reason, have denied them to date.

Deserve Support

Certainly the Bees' showing on their recent trek around the circuit should have convinced the most sceptical that they are deserving of steady patronage.

Severely handicapped by injuries that would have completely wrecked the average club, the Allston athletes broke better than even on the whole trip and took seven out of 12 games from four first-division foes in the West during a record-breaking heat spell.

They started the journey without Al Lopez, their standout catcher. Before they invaded the West they had lost "Mickey" Haslin who was playing third-base and hitting around .340, and "Buddy" Lewis second-string receiver.

In Cincinnati they saw Wally Berger and Billy Urbanski knocked off by the injury jinx. In Chicago they suffered the toughest blow of all, being robbed of the services of "Rick" Jordan, their leading hitter.

Despite all that misfortune they bring home a better percentage than they took away, proving they are one of the gamest aggregations ever assembled.

Starting their current home stand, the Bees have Berger and Lopez back in action. They could press Bill Urbanski into service if "Rabbit" Warstler, old Red Sox favorite, weren't performing like just about the best shortstop in the circuit. Joe Cascarart and Ray Mullen are making them forget the absence of Haslin and Lewis.

Buck Back Soon

Moreover, they are promised Jordan back by Sunday, and they hear it hinted that Johnny Babich who was counted upon to be their leading pitcher and hasn't pitched an inning all season, will be ready by August 1 to lend assistance to a staff which wrote history by using only 17 runs in the first nine games in the west.

So, in a man they think they're capable of carrying out the boss' order to grab off third place.

They open their drive today against the Reds, who are in fifth place, three games away.

Fourteen frays have these rivals staged thus far and 11 times have the busy Bees finished in front.

All of which indicates that our heroes will be knocking at the fifth-place door if they're not already inside by the time Charley Dressen's Brainelanders depart Friday evening.

Ben Cantwell will do the Boston pitching today. Out West, the tall Floridian hurled his best ball since 1933, when he turned in 20 wins.

He won two games with brilliant relief efforts and in his last start blanked the champion Cubs for nine innings only to lose out in the tenth, 1 to 0.

Will his ninth triumph of this campaign he's seeking as the bewildering Bees start buzzing for third place.

Cooper Is Victor In Golf Playoff

St. Paul, Minn., July 21 (U.S.)—Harry Cooper, Glen Ellyn (Ill.) pro, won his third St. Paul open title in seven years here by besting Dick Metz, Lake Forest (Ill.), in a 36-hole play-off.

Cooper turned in rounds of 66 and 69 for 135, while Dick Metz had 71 on his morning round and 68 this afternoon for 139. Cooper's win netted him $1200, while Metz won $750.

Ex-Sox Hustler Returns as Busy Bee

RABBIT WARSTLER, former Red Sox infielder who went to the Athletics from Fenway three years ago, was back in town with the Bees today, ready to open the home stay this afternoon at the Hive against the Cincinnati Reds. Warstler was waived out of the American League, the Bees grabbed him the other day, and now he's playing the best baseball of his career, for the fighting, winning Bees.

RED SOX Clash With INDIANS

GROVE SEEKS 12TH WIN

Cleveland, July 21—A couple of clubs that have long since abandoned pre-season pennant hopes open a struggle for second place out at League Park this afternoon.

One is Cleveland's Indians, who now occupy the runner-up berth as a result of a nine-game victory surge on their recent Eastern invasion. The other is Boston's Red Sox, who shot their flag bolt on their last Western trip, but are still within 1½ games of second prize.

The visitors will take the field minus their fighting leader, Joe Cronin, whose mother passed away in Florida yesterday, shortly after the Boston pilot manager reached her bedside following a coast-to-coast dash by plane.

In Cronin's absence, the Sox are being directed by Coaches Al Schacht and Herb Pennock who announce that the temperamental Robert Moses Grove will make another try to gain his 12th victory this p m.

The Indians should receive a royal welcome upon their return this afternoon. They've just completed the most successful Eastern jaunt of any Cleveland entry in ages.

After battling the league-leading Yankees tooth and nail in New York, Steve O'Neil's Tribe went on to take three in a row from the Red Sox, make a clean sweep of their series with the A's and ran their string of straight wins to nine before they were finally knocked off in the nightcap of last Sunday's twin-bill with the Senators in Washington.

Camera Finishes At Berlin Races

"The eleventh Olympiad promises to be free of the bitter "post-mortems" that have marked previous Olympic games, due to the perfection of a newly invented slow-motion picture camera, capable of recording close finishes with accuracy, declares William Shirer, Universal Service Berlin correspondent, in the eighth of a series of articles on the forthcoming games.)

By WILLIAM SHIRER

(Copyright 1936, by Universal Service.)

Berlin, July 21—A newly devised slow-motion picture camera which can serve at the same time as a stop-watch will be used to check the results of all races at the 11th Olympic games which begin here August 1.

The new apparatus, the idea for which came from America, was tried out successfully in track meets here last year. It eliminates any possibility of doubt about a place or time and will doubtless save much of that international wrangling which used to go on after close races at other Olympics held in Europe.

Encouraged by the success of Gustav Kirby's photo apparatus which snapped the finishes at Los Angeles (the German scientific committee for the games called in the government institute of technical physics which handles weights and measure problems in this country

Use 2 Cameras

This institute made a long series of tests and then called in the Zeiss Ikon and Agfa companies with the result that they have produced an apparatus, based on Kirby's camera, but, in their opinion considerably improved.

It consists of a small film camera which takes stereoscope slow-motion pictures. It works with a negative film which can be rapidly developed into a positive and the picture thrown on the screen within twelve to fifteen minutes. It works at a speed of 100 pictures to the second.

Two identical cameras operate side by side, giving pictures with the customary stereoscopic depth. Before showing, one film is colored red and the other green, and then the two superimposed on the screen. If observed through spectacles of which one glass also is colored red and the other green, then the right eye sees only the picture taken by the right camera and the left eye that taken by the left camera.

The result is that the finishes seen exactly as they occur. There is not the slightest chance of doubt. And as the rate of projection can be slowed down to pictures per second the judges even have time to talk over the order of finish as the competitors slowly edge across the screen.

The cameras at the same time show the recording of the stop watch, which is started at the firing of the pistol. This is printed on the left hand corner of the screen where it can be easily seen.

The watch consists of two revolving disks running at increasing speeds from 1 up to hundredths of a second. The lowest and fastest dial records one thousandth of a second, and this shows the one-hundredths one tenths and whole seconds. The record is two hundredths accurate.

The watch and camera are driven by synchronous motor. The frequency of the alternating current is regulated to a one-thousandth of a second by a special apparatus.

To cut down time, the films will be developed in a dark room in the judge's box.

LIBERAL, WILSON'S BEST BET

CHOICE In Suffolk FIFTH

MOUNTAIN ELK IN EIGHTH

By DAVE WILSON

(Selections for fast track)

BEST—LIBERAL, 5TH RACE

Suffolk Downs, July 21—Log Cabin stud's Liberal, as he is placed in the six furlongs of the Suffolk County Purse, fifth number, shapes up as the one solid wagering hazard on a difficult card of eight races here today.

FIRST RACE

Forced Landing, Bullfinch, Prosy

FORCED LANDING, third to Jubilee Jim, needs only to duplicate that most recent endeavor to lead this indifferent lot of $1250 top and $1000 bottom platers under the imaginary wire. BULLFINCH, beaten a whisker by Supreme Maiden last trip, figures close up. PROSY, fast and faint hearted, may hang on long enough to save the short end of the spoils.

SECOND RACE

Jack Pine, Romney Royal, Early Settler

JACK PINE running like a wild horse in the mornings, needs only to duplicate brilliant trials to graduate at the first asking. Four panels in 48 2 from the gate went as a final convincer. ROMNEY ROYAL was highly fancied in similar company only a few days back, but had scant chance to prove his true worth after being all but knocked down on the far turn. EARLY SETTLER has been pitted highly in recent endeavors.

THIRD RACE

Demonstration, Hidden Dust, Gift of Roses

DEMONSTRATION, on general New York form, shapes up vastly superior to this group of $1800 platers. The Logan colorbearer picked up 120 pounds and was beaten a slim margin by Flopsie in an Empire City final. Under a feather of 104 pounds he figures to never leave the result in doubt. HIDDEN DUST will be dangerous only in the event of rain. She's a five star mudder in my book. GIFT OF ROSES is descending the scale.

FOURTH RACE

Harry's Dream, Jeanne Fetzko, Springs Here

Stringing along with HARRY'S DREAM in this wide open affair. This youngster hails from Empire City, and on general New York form figures to stand a world of beating for major honors. JEANNE FETZKO, the main danger, drubbed weaker company in clever fashion last trip. SPRINGS HERE is the class, but may find 118 pounds too difficult to handle.

FIFTH RACE

Liberal, Black Mistress, Deliberate

LIBERAL, a nice looking colt in the care of Buddy Hirsch, receives preference over a well matched field of sprinters in this six-furlong test. The manner in which Liberal performed behind Wise Prince a week ago indicates that he has reached the peak of his form. BLACK MISTRESS, gifted with a high order of speed and a breezing winner in her final endeavor, shapes up next best. DELIBERATE is one of the top sprinters. However, he appears excessively weighted under 113 pounds.

SIXTH RACE

Bogertin, First Bid, Millimeter

BOGERTIN comes from New York with a corking record to recommend him for top honors. Beaten a slim margin in a Jamaica final, the Logan colorbearer needs only to duplicate that most recent effort. FIRST BID, pitted too highly in recent races, is strictly the horse to fear. MILLIMETER is the speed of the party. She may hang on long enough to save the short end.

SEVENTH RACE

American Prince, Strange Times, Last Romance

AMERICAN PRINCE was pitted too highly last trip. Back among his own kind, he needs only to repeat previous good races to earn brackets. STRANGE TIMES, third to Golden Septre, figures next best on the strength of that most recent endeavor. LAST ROMANCE shapes up well in the fight for the remainder of the spoils.

EIGHTH RACE

Mountain Elk, Would Dare, Blast

MOUNTAIN ELK just missed getting up to drub Prince Pompey last Saturday. Off that race it's impossible to go past the Campbell colorbearer. WOULD DARE, a brisk morning worker, comes highly recommended by the clockers. May hang on long enough to save the place. BLAST closed like a runaway express to finish third to Mad Wind only a few days back.

DOUBLE Winners Trek TO BANK

TWO REVEAL "SYSTEM"

By BOB AHEARN

Bank deposits took a slight jump today in Massachusetts, at least in four accounts.

Four fortunate gentlemen won the Daily Double at Suffolk Downs yesterday, which paid them $3289.40, and this morning they called on their favorite banks to deposit a part of the money which fell in their lap like a golden flood.

The gentlemen, however, do not intend to refrain from playing the horses.

Take Archibald Carruthers, the Providence garage-man, who was one of the fortunate four. "I will be back at Suffolk Downs again this afternoon," he said this morning. "For 25 years, I've been following the races, and do you think I'd let a little thing like winning a daily double stop me from returning?

"I've won many a daily double in my time, but never one that paid off at such a price. My system is to select a key horse in the third race and then combine it with every one in the first."

Gives Up Job

Then there was Bernard O'Brien of South st., Jamaica Plain. As soon as he was paid off by check in the mutuel department, he left for home.

"I picked Dilwin as my key horse and then coupled it with Cash Book and Petard," stated O'Brien.

Another winner, a Lowell bartender, called his boss and gave him his resignation. He then went to New York city by plane to celebrate his good fortune.

The remaining holder of the combination, an unidentified middle aged man, took his winnings and asked to be escorted from the track.

The payoff of $3289.40 was the largest in these parts since the daily double was inaugurated at Narragansett two seasons ago. Previous record payoff was that of Jubilargo and Uncle Donald at Narragansett, July 4, 1935. That combination returned $2450 to the holders of winning double ducats.

At Rockingham Park's Spring meeting there occurred a daily double payoff of $1837.80, while at Narragansett's opening day the double returned $1070.90. Although yesterday's Suffolk double payoff was a record for New England it was far from the highest in American racing. A year ago at Tropical Park, a truck driver from New Jersey held the only winning double ticket which amounted to over $7000.

With the daily double fever at a new high, due to the telephone number figures yesterday New Englanders by the thousands will be striving to pick the winner of this form of betting this afternoon at Suffolk Downs.

COLLYER'S SPORT OF KINGS COMMENT

By BERT E. COLLYER

A good 'un is BOTTLE CAP, one from the stable of Lucky Antoine Pelleteri and which rates among the best juveniles at Arlington Park these days, that comes along from the chief of staff marked X X X Special.

The Bostonian colt goes in the fourth and if he runs back to that last, when he dashed five furlongs in 1:05, it is nothing less than a cakewalk. Nor is there any valid reason why he shouldn't.

Oh, yes, and before I forget it, there's WINGED VICTORY, in the first. This is a well-touted one from the Milky Way outfit which had no chance to run last time. It'll be different today. MIN ORMONT, which has been raced to the feather edge, figures to make things interesting in the seventh. Hey, hey.

At Empire

Back at Empire, I advise that you take a long looksee at LUCKY PLEDGE, which is entered with a band of cheap ones in the second. This is a full sister to Gallant Fox from the Belair barn. She hasn't raced, but is reported a grand looker. Also, morning trials have been eminently satisfactory.

Ole Boy Baroni may come to life with his ANN O'RULEY in the fourth, while OPEN RANGE, which was heavily backed by the right people last time, is accorded something of an edge in the fifth. SPITTENIMAGE is a natural and logical favorite in the sixth, but you must watch the JACOBS ENTRY closely here.

At Suffolk

Something of an off-day program at Suffolk—where they're getting ready to give away $25,000 in one lump on Wednesday—but GIFT OF ROSES should account for the third and LIBERAL seems something of a spread in the featured fifth. The fourth is close between JEANNE FETZKO and HARRY'S DREAM. Relative to this one, would suggest that you tab the ring action closely. That thing dough talks louder than anything I know—even internationally.

Comes word from Thistledown that TEMPLE HILL will win—right back. YANKEE WATERS, in the fourth, is another from Cleveland that looks plenty good to these old eyes. Wheel it away, blondie.

AMERICAN SPONSORS MOTOR BOAT RACE

For Firethorn

Wilson Carries Torch

By DAVE EGAN

On the eve of the $25,000 Massachusetts Handicap, your envoy finds himself in a state of sad confusion.

It was all firmly settled in my mind that this was to be a pitched battle between Discovery and Time Supply, with the others clippety-clopping along in the rear, and I had decided to make a small, but none-theless heart-felt wager on Time Supply.

Dave Egan

Then our Mr. Dave Wilson, with a clanking of spurs, appeared in a tallyho, and now I am in a state of unutterable and indescribable confusion. For our Mr. Dave Wilson is selecting Firethorn to win the richest race, to date, of the New England season.

There are times when I openly sneer at our Mr. Wilson, especially when cheap plugs are running, but when he handicaps an important race, I stand up and take my hat off and say, "Yes, Mr. Wilson," and "No, Mr. Wilson."

Has Clicked

Mr. Wilson picked Top Row to win the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap last February, and late in May, he ventured the opinion that Bold Venture would win the Kentucky Derby, and now, he purses his lips and, in a choosy manner, he tells you that Firethorn will beat Discovery, Time Supply, and all the others.

Mebbe so, mebbe so. It's a great field of thoroughbreds for the finest race ever arranged for the East Boston track, and almost anything can happen when Jim Milton yanks the bell and they start beating a drum-fire of hoofs on that fast racing strip.

Discovery, from all accounts, will be an even money choice to win, and the chances are that he may be even four-to-five when they leave the post. These turf followers do not desert their old favorites too easily. They remember Discovery as the greatest horse of 1935; they know he ran a gee-whillikens of a trial down in New York before being shipped here; and they appreciate the fact, after all, he is still Discovery.

The Vanderbilt star does not run at his best in a large field, so they say, and there may be a dozen starters in the Massachusetts. I've heard it said that he sulks when he's bumped, and roughed around a trifle, and that the jocks, having discovered his weakness, go to work on him in a large field.

This may not be so, but certainly, we are going to learn a good deal about Discovery and his future before tomorrow becomes just another old date on a calendar. We're going to find out if he left all his running back in the great year of 1935, whether he still has a few more good gallops left in his system.

Second Choice

Time Supply, in the overnight books, is the second choice at two-to-one. Seamy-faced track veterans tell me that he is coming up to the race in the pink of perfection; that he can run on any kind of track, and that if he is beaten, it will be by a better horse.

Stand Pat, in the pre-race speculation, seems to be just another horse named Joe, but there are those who love him. He won the Stars and Stripes at Arlington Park, Chicago, on the Fourth of July, beating Whopper and Discovery among others, and there is no guarantee that he will not upset Firethorn, Discovery, Time Supply, and the others with another burst of superlative speed.

The probable starters in the race, arranged in accordance with their weights, are as follows: Discovery, 136; Firethorn, 122; Time Supply, 121; Stand Pat, 119; Clang, 117; Good Gamble, 114; Dark Hope, 114; Black Gift, 104; Chance Line, 103; Howard, 103; Gov. Sholtz, 100, Brown Top, 100, and Knight Warrior, 98.

Two New England-owned thoroughbreds are entered. Paul Shaw of Newton will start Gov. Sholtz, and Mrs. Walter O'Hara will send Howard back to the wars.

CHARLES River Is SCENE

MILE TRIALS AT WORCESTER

By JACK CONWAY (Sports Editor)

The great motor boat regatta under the direction of the Central New England Regatta Association and the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser will be held at the Charles River Basin on August 1 and August 2.

It has also been arranged to hold the mile trials at Lake Quinsigamond, Worcester, on August 3.

Commodore Stanley W. Ferguson announces there will be $2750 worth of valuable prizes.

It is the second year this huge regatta has been conducted in the Charles River Basin by the New England Regatta Association and the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser. A year ago it attracted more than 100,000 persons, who were thrilled by the races.

The best of the outboard motor racers will compete. They will come here from all parts of the United States and will strive to set up new records.

Carl L. Lindberg, with headquarters at the Hotel Lenox, Stanley W. Ferguson, with offices at No. 5 State street, and Charles F. Chapman of No. 959 Eighth avenue, New York city, are prepared to furnish entry blanks and any information desired by persons wishing to enter their boats in the big regatta.

There has been a tremendous growth in interest in outboard motor boat races during the past few years. The great speed at which these boats travel have made a wide appeal to thrill seeking Americans.

The Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser have given the New England Regatta Association full co-operation in making these regattas successful. This year's event should be even better than the regatta held a year ago, and should attract 150,000 persons to the Charles River Basin.

The Basin is an ideal spot for such a classic as there is ample room along its sides for all who wish to witness the races.

It was decided to hold the mile trials at Lake Quinsigamond on August 3 as the course there will give the drivers a chance to set new records.

Woodbury, Last Out Meet at Taunton

FAST FIELD IN NINTH EVENT

By MATTHEW KEANEY

Woodbury, the smashing pacemaker from G. H. Rogers' kennel, and Last Out, Hubert Bryant's star money collector, look like chief challengers tonight in the featured futurity contest at the Taunton dog track.

The co-feature ninth sets up Mr. Rafferty, a nice winner in his last effort over the 5-16-mile route, with Playhouse, F. B. Stutz's consistent money-getter, and Elsie Breeze out to prove their worth as possible entries for the Gold Collar Championship eliminations scheduled for next Monday and Tuesday.

The long distance has been chosen by Racing Secretary Clint Dewhurst as the ideal course for the big stake race July 30.

7	Major	64	8-1
6	Review	56½	3-1
1	Durn's Knight	67	10-1
3	Sands Of Pleasure	61½	2-1
2	Pleasant Play	59	4-1
8	Double	66	12-1
4	Kashmir Guard	67½	6-1
5	Smashing Rover	66	8-1

SANDS OF PLEASURE well overdue to cop in this class. REVIEW here should be the challenger. PLEASANT PLAY looks best for rest.

SECOND RACE—FUTURITY
RINKA, YANKEE JIM, LUCERNE TRAFFIC

6	Registered Nurse	52	8-1
2	Luck's Lassie	52	8-1
1	Rinka	64	10-1
5	Rube Jamestown	55½	2-1
4	Yankee Jim	58	3-1
3	Paddy Lin	70	12-1
1	Ivory Boy	62½	5-1
8	Lucerne Traffic	60	4-1

RINKA had no excuse in last, should come all the way here tonight. YANKEE JIM with early start will be close up. LUCERNE TRAFFIC can have the rest.

THIRD RACE—5-16 MILE
ROYAL REX, CHIEF'S COYOTE, COLUMBIA RIVER
LAST HALF DAILY DOUBLE

5	Royal Coon	66	10-1
7	Cliffman	61½	8-1
4	Kashmir Dusk	56	6-1
2	Chief's Coyote	66	3-1
7	Kilgurk	62	12-1
6	Royal Rex	59	2-1
3	Half Rock	62	6-1
8	Columbia River	68	4-1

ROYAL REX, coming back to early winning form, should get through for this. CHIEF'S COYOTE has been coming on again—blocked in last—this may be it. COLUMBIA RIVER will threaten leaders all the way.

FOURTH RACE—FUTURITY
PATSIE MC, THE PRINTER, MARFAK

6	Glassmullagh Boy	54	12-1
8	Kilmihill's Best	66	8-1
4	Marfak	67	4-1
1	Lucerne Officer	66	8-1
2	Rochorn	65	10-1
6	Tiger Donna	57	5-1
7	The Printer	62	3-1
3	Patsie Mc	68	3-1

PATSIE MC should repeat win at this distance, has plenty of staying power. THE PRINTER must come up in form to have the next. MARFAK is class of rest.

FIFTH RACE—5-16 MILE
BLACK BUDDY, BORDEN, GARRY'S POND

7	Idiot's Call	61	10-1
3	Garry's Pond	59	4-1
2	Cap Hare	59	8-1
5	Rookie Sailor	61	6-1
8	Black Buddy	70	2-1
1	Small Shot	57	12-1
1	Chief Onward	70	5-1
6	Borden	67	3-1

BLACK BUDDY, fast breaker stretch driver, needs the distance here, but should take it all. BORDEN, a ranking router, should be close up. GARRY'S POND due for the little portion.

SIXTH RACE—FUTURITY
SINGLE TRAFFIC, PRANCING STEP, FULTON'S LEADER

7	Fulton's Leader	61	4-1
1	Meadow Roy	60	10-1
4	King Bolt	68	8-1
3	Clamorous Girl	58	6-1
5	Premier Yale	54	8-1
2	Prancing Step	62	3-1
2	Far West	64	12-1
6	Single Traffic	[illegible]	2-1

SINGLE TRAFFIC winner and show in last two, due to hit the highest for this honor. PRANCING STEP should like longer distance to shape for next spot. FULTON'S LEADER on way to early form, should get little but.

SEVENTH RACE—5-16 MILE
FRISCO BEBE, SCHOOL GOER, FLYING ALLEY

3	Frisco Bebe	[illegible]	3-1
1	Dick Sahara	[illegible]	8-1
2	Dorothy Lass	58	10-1
4	School Goer	[illegible]	3-1
6	Bray	61	8-1
7	Guy Kashmir	57	12-1
8	Flying Alley	[illegible]	4-1
5	Rilleen	63	5-1

FRISCO BEBE nominated here on her fancy record. SCHOOL GOER, consistent as they come, should get up for the next. FLYING ALLEY will have to fight class to get the biddy bit.

EIGHTH RACE—FUTURITY
VAGABOND BREEZE, WOODBURY, LUCERNE TOM

4	Lucerne Tom	61	4-1
2	Woodbury	69	3-1
6	Jack London	65½	8-1
3	Jack Kro Kan	62	10-1
1	Chase Me	62	8-1
7	Black Moment	61	6-1
8	Vagabond Breeze	75	2-1
5	Last Out	67	[illegible]-1

VAGABOND BREEZE almost nipped winner with splendid drive in last due to come through tonight. WOODBURY, winner and loser, has all the leader needs, should make pace and finish close. LUCERNE TOM greatly improved, better watch behind winner.

NINTH RACE—5-16 MILE
MISTER RAFFERTY, PLAYHOUSE, ELSIE BREEZE

3	Elsie Breeze	58	4-1
6	Big Better	62	10-1
1	Like Hare	57	8-1
5	Badger's Best	63	6-1
8	Big Monthie	60	12-1
4	Mister Rafferty	58	2-1
2	Lively Mistress	47	8-1
7	Playhouse	53	3-1

MISTER RAFFERTY at this distance looks like a repeater tonight. PLAYHOUSE won't be far behind. ELSIE BREEZE is dark threat to leaders, will get a share.

TENTH RACE—FUTURITY
DR. O'CONNELL, ARTHUR BOY, BESSEY'S DAUGHTER

1	Arthur Boy	61	3-1
5	Dr. O'Connell	66	2-1
4	White Hackle	61	12-1
6	Jack Obstacle	55	6-1
3	Bessey's Daughter	58	4-1
2	Primax	57	8-1
7	Busenbark	70	6-1
8	Just Chatter	58½	10-1

DR. O'CONNELL, sensational in first win, a canny galloper, should go again tonight. ARTHUR BOY, knocking at the door, sure to be near there at the finish. BESSEY'S DAUGHTER looks good for small portion.

New Berth for Billy

Memphis, Tenn., July 21 (AP)—Billy Southworth, 42-year-old pilot of the Asheville, N. C., club of the Piedmont League, a St. Louis Cardinal farm, was appointed to succeed Fred Hoffman as manager of the Memphis Southern Association Chicks.

SHARKEY Confident of VICTORY

BOUT TO AID MILK FUND

By Jack Conway

Jack Sharkey was in a jubilant mood today when told by Johnny Buckley, his manager, that he has been signed to battle "Bomber" Joe Louis in a ten-round bout at the Yankee Stadium, New York, on August 18, under the direction of Mike Jacobs' Twentieth Century Club.

"I shall beat Louis," said Sharkey with a degree of certainty. "I have always had the Indian sign on colored boxers. Remember what I did to George Godfrey and Harry Wills?

"I felt my old self as I recently won from Phil Brubaker. I kept going better the longer the fight lasted.

"I have had four bouts since last December, and have fought myself into shape. As champion, I only boxed once a year. That is not enough action for a heavyweight.

"I saw Louis the night he knocked out Max Baer, and I decided right then I could lick him. I didn't see him against Max Schmeling as I was busy training for Brubaker at the time.

"I think I know too much about boxing for Louis. He won't hit me with his right hand shots, while I think I shall be able to get inside of his guard with left hooks and short right hand smashes to the jaw.

Starts Training

"Louis will carry a mental burden when he enters the ring against me. He has just been knocked out by Schmeling, and way down deep in his heart he will be wondering whether I shall also score a kayo. He knows I have beaten Schmeling, and that won't do him any god.

"I shall begin training at once at Buckley's Gym. Early in August I shall shift my training camp to a spot outside of New York.

"After I beat Louis, I shall be ready to take on Max Schmeling or Jimmy Braddock. It looks as if I am well on the way back to the championship."

The Sharkey-Louis bout will have the co-operation of the Milk Fund. This organization will receive 10 per cent of the receipts.

Sharkey and Louis are each reported to be getting 20 per cent of the receipts.

Johnny Buckley signed the contracts for the bout for Sharkey, while Julian Black okayed the tussle for Louis. The latter will establish a training camp outside of New York the latter part of this month.

TODD'S Haft Goes at REVERE

NO. 1 BOX WILL HELP

By SAM COHEN

Todd's Haft, N. G. Allen kennel star, appears best bet of this evening's racing card at Wonderland Park.

With the advantage of the rail position the noted long distance star should be ahead of his field at the judges' stand in the eighth and feature race of the program.

FIRST RACE—FUTURITY
FAWN MARSHALL, YOUNG STAR, ONLY BOY

P.P.	Dog	Wt.	Owner	P. Odds
6	Fawn Marshall	72	L. W. Randall	4-1
5	Young Star	66	C. R. Findlater	4-1
1	Only Boy	63	William Baker	8-1
4	Belanca Flyer	64	W. McDonough	8-1
1	Irishman	61	R. B. Carroll	7-1
5	Dragline	70	John Pesek	8-1
7	Shy Harry	60	Charles Holmes	8-1
2	Betty Carman	56	W. Worthington	12-1

SECOND RACE—5-16 MILE
MOBY SKEETS, BILLIE CHARM, LITTLE CHAMP

8	Moby Skeets	64	J. D. Hall	5-1
2	Billie Charm	56	W. B. Cox	5-1
3	Little Champ	66	E. McGinnis	5-1
7	Jara	45	C. R. Findlater	7-1
1	Contract Lad	62	H. Highhouse	8-1
4	Just Lone On	77	Crescent Ken.	10-1
7	Mohil Oil	66	J. W. Ewalt	10-1
8	Roving Gypsy	60	Arch De Geer	10-1

MOBY SKEETS apparently on the improve in recent race form, cat a slight edge here over cheap box of routers. Dog has been unable to win here this season, so [illegible] for final victory. BILLIE CHARM a factor if able to break with leaders, might hang on for second. LITTLE CHAMP for the rest. Others have shown much lately.

THIRD RACE—5-16 MILE
COCO BUCK, BARRY, FARLEIGHSTON

3	Coco Buck	62	Sid Manor	4-1
6	Barry	64	H. E. Alderson	3-1
1	Farleighston	72	J. D. Hall	6-1
4	Burk Whirlwind	60	Fred Phillips	8-1
2	Flying Foil	55	Crescent Ken.	8-1
7	Saint Andrew	75	John Pesek	8-1
5	Happy Traffic	[illegible]	E. Doyle	10-1
8	Salty Sea	53	J. J. Keenan	10-1

COCO BUCK, on the improve at over the 5-16 mile distance, might stick it out against this class tonight. Dog has been well up throughout in previous efforts over this distance and is well placed to break on [illegible] in this race. BARRY and FARLEIGHSTON, two fairly consistent in the money at this distance, should both be able to argue in the closing stages. Others have shown good form occasionally, but are rather erratic.

FOURTH RACE—FUTURITY
NICK THE OFFICER, LITTLE SHAM, JUST RESULTS

1	Nick the Officer	68	Dan Oswald	3-1
5	Little Sham	66	W. Withington	9-2
4	Just Results	65	J. D. Hall	5-1
6	Kan City Kelly	64	Mrs. Failing	7-1
2	Brave Show	64	J. Thompson	9-1
6	Perfect Harmony	52	Dennis Allen	8-1
1	Sonny Hugh	60	Sarah B. Allan	10-1
8	Happymood	60	Wm. Jensen	8-1

NICK THE OFFICER, heavy favorite to win his first race at Wonderland Saturday, probably needed that start as a tightener and should improve enough here to hold this box of pups safe throughout. Most of these have been [illegible] but LITTLE SHAM showed fairly good form until in trouble on Saturday. Deserves another chance. JUST RESULTS the best of the rest.

FIFTH RACE—5-16 MILE
SILVER $ BAR, CHIEF MATAGHA, CHIEF JUSTICE

1	Silver $ Bar	64	N. G. Allen	8-1
6	Chief Matagha	65	E. Doyle	5-1
2	Chief Justice	62	H. Highhouse	6-1
7	Storm Cloud	60	Sid Manor	6-1
3	Lady Cullet	52	S. B. Cox	7-1
4	Midnight June	49	H. E. Alderson	8-1
6	Dark Lad	68	Chas. Holmes	10-1
5	Sargent Al	56	J. A. Austin	10-1

SILVER $ BAR, winner by five lengths previous starts, is the one to beat here. Dog has drawn the one hole and may never be headed. CHIEF MATAGHA also won his last and may be dangerous from the outside. CHIEF JUSTICE showed signs of return to form last start. Others must improve.

SIXTH RACE—FUTURITY
BROADWAY JIM, DAY COURT, SKYLINE MAHOUT

1	B'dway Jim	61	Mrs. Failing	8-1
3	Day Court	53	Dan Oswald	8-1
2	Skyline Mahout	62	Wm. Jensen	5-1
8	Traffic Trawler	61	Wm. Baker	6-1
4	Howe Motor	62	Gus Males	7-1
7	Lady Friend	55	E. Doyle	8-1
6	Helen C	52	S. B. Cox	8-1
8	Sahara Chief	60	F. C. Lawman	10-1

BROADWAY JIM consistently good until moved up the class ladder previous out, probably needed that race against faster company and should hit his real stride here. Pup drew the one hole and should be up with the leaders if ready to run his race. DAY COURT also well placed and should be a factor. SKYLINE MAHOUT oftentimes weakens, yet might hang on for show. Others have shown something occasionally. SAHARA CHIEF might surprise and take it all at a long price.

SEVENTH RACE—5-16 MILE
FRIENDLY SHOE, GANGSTER'S MICKEY, BETTY IOTA

2	Friendly Shoe	59	H. E. Alderson	5-1
3	G'ng'st'r's Mick'y	61	Dennis Allen	6-1
4	Betty Iota	52	Charles Holmes	6-1
2	Buddy J	61	R. E. Randle	6-1
5	Frisky Lad	64	John Allen	7-1
6	Our Lassie	60	F. C. Lawman	8-1
7	M'tchless Officer	65	William Baker	10-1
8	Powerful Eagle	66	E. McGinnis	10-1

FRIENDLY SHOE, three lengths off the winner Saturday, may have needed that race as a tightener for this evening's effort. Pup has beaten his class earlier in the season and might surprise at a nice price here. GANGSTER'S MICKEY close up recently, should be in the money and might take it all. BETTY IOTA has shown speed when loose. BUDDY J hard to figure.

EIGHTH RACE—5-16 MILE
TODD'S HAFT, HIP TWISTER, BUTCH'S THUMB

1	Todd's Haft	63	N. G. Allen	5-1
3	Hip Twister	51	Crescent Ken.	5-1
6	Butch's Thumb	65	Dennis Allen	5-1
6	Reckless Tom	72	John Pesek	6-1
7	Lingo	65	J. W. Ewalt	7-1
5	Faira	54	Freda Koontz	8-1
4	Englewood	61	L. W. Randall	8-1
3	Kemp	67	Jess Bingham	10-1

TODD'S HAFT, very speedy in recent efforts from the inside, may be the right one here. Pup has habit of finishing either first or last, and breaking from the one hole, should be well up tonight. HIP TWISTER'S recent ones are good enough to give her a chance. BUTCH'S THUMB not yet in top form, according to form exhibited last two. Others not out of it with best effort.

NINTH RACE—5-16 MILE
CONNIE MACK, PEPPER MARK, TWINKLE'S LADDIE

2	Connie Mack	62	L. E. Thompson	4-1
7	Pepper Mark	66	R. E. Randle	6-1
3	Twinkle's Laddie	57	W. Worthington	6-1
4	Offic'r Lightning	63	Dan Oswald	7-1
1	Regal Andrew	72	John Pesek	7-1
8	Shipmate	63	E. Doyle	8-1
6	St'ney's Favorite	71	L. W. Randall	8-1
5	Genial Officer	68	Art Wilson	12-1

CONNIE MACK third last two trips against this class of competition, likely to take it all from the three hole tonight. Dog has been consistently good, but has won only once. PEPPER MARK off 32 flat race on the tenth, figures a chance. So does TWINKLE'S LADDIE, whose best efforts have been from the inside. OFFICER LIGHTNING seems to be in improved form.

TENTH RACE—5-16 MILE
MISS JUST ROLL, BUMPED OFF, JUST MAX

6	Miss Just Roll	59	J. A. Austin	5-1
1	Bumped Off	64	Bud Sunday	5-1
8	Just Max	68	Crescent Ken.	6-1
1	Tarras Speed	6[illegible]	Jess Bingham	6-1
3	Hay Span	68	R. B. Carroll	8-1
2	Dinty Dennis	66	William Baker	8-1
4	Sand Cloud	60	F. C. Lawman	10-1
5	Wise Friend	66	J. W. Ewalt	10-1

MISS JUST ROLL, speedy router when free, likely to break with first few here and run them down in stretch. BUMPED OFF, always near the leaders, should again be in the money. JUST MAX, winner of last one, is unreliable, but must be considered a factor. TARRAS SPEED has been in the money his last three starts.

Defy Desert Sun to Reach Longwood

Old man Hard Luck camped on the trail of two of California's most lovely sun-kissed daughters.

Dogged by disaster, their ancient equipage, a flivver breaking down in impossible places daily, these smiling collegians came limping across the finish line at Longwood 10 days after their take-off at Los Angeles.

To hear them tell it, it was all a lark to Misses Gracyn Wheeler, a 22-year-old senior, and Jane Stanton, an 18-year-old sophomore, at the University of California at Los Angeles.

But when a couple of attractive girls, refined and dainty, spend a night alone in the desert, bog down in the mud of Texas swamps, are forced to take their car apart in the burning heat of a tropical summer and then find themselves without money hundreds of miles from nowhere—then all we can say is that they needed the Spartan courage of their forebears which heeded Horace Greeley's advice, "Go West."

Gracyn, no newcomer hereabouts—she's ranked sixth nationally and seeded second in the Longwood Bowl tourney—will occasion no surprise should she succeed Mrs. Van Ryn, who, this year, forfeits her title.

But Jane, a petite little blonde miss, is not so well known as her auburn companion.

But they do say that Jane may wreck some of the veterans before this week's play is history.

The pair, vanguard of ten fellow women Californians who are here at Brookline and 13 male competitors, ran into trouble shortly after leaving Coronado, California, a week ago Monday.

Journeying the southern route, through Texas, Mississippi, Arizona and Louisiana, they cracked a cylinder head at Yuma, Arizona, or rather 30 miles out in the desert. They thumbed their way into town at three in the morning only to find that none would give them credit or take them on face value. They had their traveler cheques in the deserted car.

Finally the deputy sheriff took compassion on their plight and rescued them. But first they had to pawn their wrist watches to defray the expenses of $9.00 for the new gadget.

The next day the car's bearings burnt out in Arizona. And that was something. But no worse than when they hit a dirt road detour in Texas and were left stranded for hours in fender deep clay and mud. A couple of bovines finally ended their tearful plight.

Then hitting into Memphis the generator went berserk and by this time their funds are exhausted and Pa Wheeler, the insurance man, and Dad Stanton, the lumber king, find pleas for financial assistance awaiting them at Los Angeles.

And so it went with brief spells of real enjoyment like the times they doffed the traveling pajamas in favor of bathing outfits and slipped into the numerous ditches and creeks to swim away their sorrows.

"Hearst" Age Limit Stands | Bald Peak Play Lures

By BILL GRIMES

On his way from New York to Melvin Village, N. H., where the Bald Peak medal and match play invitation will be played this week-end, W. Wallace Lyons is visiting here, but will leave for Wolfeboro this afternoon.

The Bald Peak invitation promises to be one of the greatest events of its kind ever staged. Due to the large and classy entry, the committee voted to have two championship divisions, the Bald Peak and the Lake Winnipesaukee.

Jess Sweetser, former United States and British amateur titlist, will head a large delegation of New Yorkers, including George Herman Ruth, Sultan Of Swat, Dick Chapman, who was the runner up to Elmer Ward in the New England Amateur championship in 1930, Eddie Driggs, Eddie Held, Mark Stewart and George Voigt.

Bill Grimes

There will be a large delegation of Greater Boston golfers at Bald Peak for the week end. Francis Ouimet, Jesse P. Guilford, Eddie Lowery, Ned Peterson, Allan V. Elias, Rodney W. Brown, Freddie Wright and Ray Deston will be the outstanding Bostonians.

Babe Ruth and Jesse Guilford have been paired up for the qualifying round, which will be played on Friday. According to Wallace Lyons, Ruth is playing great golf and has never hit the ball as well or as far as at present. And, incidently, Guilford is right at the peak of his game, or, at least he was during the Jaques cup contest at the Country Club.

Bald Peak is one of the finest courses in New England. It was Thomas G. Plant's private course for many years and offers a severe test of golf.

Sorry I'm unable to comply with the wishes of the many ardent followers of junior golf who have written me to increase the age limit for the "Hearst" from the 19th to the 21st birthday. All Hearst New England junior championships are played under the rules and regulations of the Massachusetts Golf Association. Therefore, it would not be fair nor advisable for the Boston Evening American to change its policy, especially in view of the fact that the powers that be in local golfdom are contemplating such a move. It would be altogether too much like an attempt to force the M. G. A. to take such a step.

However, in the event [illegible] M. G. A. votes to increase [illegible] limit for its junior chan[illegible] the Boston Evening Am[illegible] lose no time following [illegible]

"Hearst" Golfers From Newton to Play Qualifying Round at Blue Hills

Through an oversight Newton was not allotted a Hearst qualifying site . . . Newton juniors will qualify at the Blue Hill Country Club on Monday, Aug. 10 . . . The South Shore Country Club expects a large field at its annual open tournament Friday and Saturday . . . South Shore will introduce a novel idea by sponsoring a match play versus par tourney in conjunction with its regular medal play event . . . The contestants will be allowed three-quarters of their state handicaps as the strokes come on the card . . . This innovation was to appease the many who claim that they always come up with one or two bad holes in every medal play tournament and when they finally finish playing these holes they have stroked themselves out of any and all chances of winning a prize.

Jim Collins Pilots a Wrestling Match —3000 Feet Up in the Air

By FLOYD GIBBONS

FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Now you know as well as I do that an airplane is one doggone easy thing to get in trouble with. You've probably read a lot of stories of adventure in the air—I've printed a lot of them in this column. But, boys and girls, you ain't heard nuthin' 'til you've grabbed yourself an eyeful of this yarn from Distinguished Adventurer Jim Collins of Brooklyn, N. Y.

What happened to Jim was that he got hold of an airplane and didn't know how to get rid of it. Ordinarily, that wouldn't be such a serious problem. But Jim's plane was in the air, and that sort of complicated matters.

It was down in Miami, Florida, in the Summer of 1919. Jim was taking flying lessons from the noted pilot, Wholmer Stultz. He'd had two hours instructions, and he knew how to keep the plane going once it was up in the air. He wasn't any too good at that, either, and he admits it. Furthermore, he hadn't the slightest idea of how to take a plane off the ground—or to land it.

That was the status quo when, one day, Stultz hired a girl to do parachute jumps off the wing of his plane. The girl said she had made several jumps, and Stultz took her word for it. They took off one hot July day in an old O X Waco to give an exhibition, and Jim Collins went along—well—just for the ride.

Jim and the girl sat in the front cockpit. Stultz, in the rear cockpit, was doing the flying. They climbed to 3000 feet, and Stultz signaled the girl to jump. She climbed out on the wing and—then things began to happen.

The girl got out to the end of the wing, and there she lost her head. She grabbed a strut and hung onto it for dear life. Stultz yelled to her to jump, but instead, she wrapped her legs around the strut, too. Then Stultz called to her to come back, and after a lot of coaxing she started.

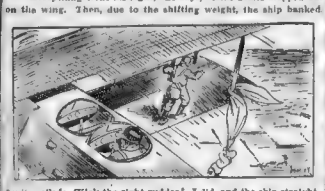

She had only gone a few feet when, suddenly, she slipped and fell from the wing. At the same time, she pulled the ripcord of her chute. The chute opened—caught on the rigging of the plane. And there was the girl, hanging from the bottom of the wing, unable to pull herself up.

To land the plane would have meant certain death for the girl. While Jim gaped open-mouthed at the sight of her dangling to the wind, he heard Stultz shout to him:

"Climb back here with me." Jim was scared out of his wits. "I started to obey," he says, "but half-way to the cockpit I froze—just as frightened as the girl was. Stultz grabbed me and pulled me in. 'I'm going out there and get her,' he said, 'you keep flying straight ahead.'"

Well sir, the next few minutes were a nightmare to Jim.

"Everything went all right," he says, "until Stultz stepped out on the wing. Then, due to the shifting weight, the ship banked Stultz yelled: 'Kick the right rudder.' I did, and the ship straightened, but my knees were knocking together, and try as I would, I couldn't keep the plane straight. Several times I almost dumped him off."

And what would happen if he DID dump Stultz off? That's about all Jim could think of. For with Stultz gone, who'd land the ship? Not Jim, certainly. He didn't know the first thing about landing a plane.

Meanwhile, the big adventure was happening out on the wing of the plane, where a brave man, teetering over space, was fighting for the life of a fear-crazed girl. Stultz was having his troubles

"He got her up," says Jim, "and then followed the wildest wrestling match I ever saw. The girl, panic stricken, grabbed Wholmer around the neck. She got a strangle hold on him and began choking. He tried to break her grip, but it was hard work. He was blue in the face and getting desperate when, finally, he let go with a right hook that knocked her out for 20 minutes.

The girl was out. Still standing on that crazily teetering wing, Stultz began ripping the chute from her. He wrapped it around the struts and then around the girl, tying her down firmly to the wing. Then, all but exhausted, his face still blue from the throttling he had taken, he began edging his way toward the cockpit.

Jimmy Collins says that nothing in the world ever looked so good to him as the sight of Wholmer Stultz climbing back into the cockpit again. It began to look to him then as if well—maybe he wouldn't have to land that plane himself and get killed in the doing of it. Stultz tumbled over the rim of the cockpit into Jim's lap, and still sitting in Jim's lap, he took the controls and headed the plane back toward good old Miami, terra firma once more.

They made the landing without any further trouble. The girl came to again a few minutes later, and then Jim and Wholmer Stultz found out that she had never made a parachute jump before.

She was only bluffing—but my hat is off to a girl who'll bluff her way into a parachute jump!

Now how about sending me your adventure story I know doggone well you've got one because everybody has had some sort of a thrill. Send it along and join the Adventurers' Club. Mussolini Offers Job To Clarence Brown

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service
Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, July 21—Mussolini's great interest in motion pictures and his plans for large scale film production in Italy are something for Hollywood to think about.

Louella O. Parsons

Already offers are being made to our stars and directors, the most recent to Clarence Brown who won Il Duce's award for Garbo's "Anna Karenina."

Not only [illegible] the Metro director [illegible] write his own financial ticket but he is offered so attractive a subject as the life of Leonardo Da Vinci.

The world has known no more colorful and romantic figure than Da Vinci, the handsome, Herculean thirteenth century Florentine. Leonardo gained immortality as sculptor, author, poet, philosopher, architect, engineer and mathematician, not to mention undying fame as the artist who gave us "The Last Supper" and "La Gioconda," better known, perhaps, as "Mona Lisa." No wonder Director Brown is pleading with Metro for a leave-of-absence.

Love's a funny thing. It makes men fight for freedom only to relinquish it. All of which is merely a colyumnist's meditation on the news that George Raft will receive his divorce decree in January, and immediately thereafter will make Virginia Peine the new Mrs. Raft, unless, of course, Virginia exercises the feminine prerogative to change her mind about Georgie. Meantime, Paramount has determined definitely not to grant George leave of absence from the home-grounds for that attractive Gaumont-British proposition which has been in the offing. So instead of being a sea-going Raft, George will be working soon as star of a story being especially written for him by Norman Krasna.

Echoes from the day of the "Jerry Flappers" reverberated through the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios last week when Irving Thalberg planned a coaxing campaign which may bring Geraldine Farrar back to her public in a "Maytime" role. Geraldine was the adored one of her day, and for the youngsters who don't remember, the "Jerry Flappers" were a group of young girl idolators who thronged the Metropol[illegible] [illegible] appeared. The [illegible] Maytime [illegible] Nelson Eddy [illegible] Mary Garden [illegible] contract to Metro [illegible] Mae West [illegible].

O[illegible] Anna May Wong, the [illegible] of the [illegible] accepted [illegible] by her countrymen in China. Although Anna May was born in California, she felt that her first visit to China was going home. She soon found, however, that in the Flowery Republic she was regarded as an American, just as in Hollywood she is considered an Oriental. Moreover, her knowledge of Cantonese was of no help in the northern provinces, which have their own dialects, so the only way she could converse with the Chinese was in pigeon English. She finally has conquered both language and prejudice and is now thoroughly enjoying her Chinese interlude.

Chatter in Hollywood: The very attractive Eleanor Whitney, who is fast dancing her way into the hearts of the movie-going public, has a new romance. His name is Robert Howard and he is the son of an automobile magnate. These warm evenings he's been beauing Eleanor here, there and everywhere. Which means that Johnny Downs, who was her chief heart interest before the advent of Mr. Howard, is no longer Eleanor's head man.

With the renewed impetus lent Shakespearian production by the furore created with "Romeo and Juliet," there has been talk that Norma Shearer, fairest "Juliet," might again portray a Swan of Avon heroine as the "Rosalind" of "As You Like It." The rumor is interesting but, unfortunately, without foundation in fact. For the Elizabeth Bergner version of the classic produced by Alexander Korda for United Artists is practically completed and will reach the nation's screens long before an American picture could be made.

Dorothy Mackaill Wins Cohasset Triumph

By MARION FRENCH

"Personal Appearance," one of the most popular of the recent plays kidding Hollywood, was presented last evening at the Town Hall in Cohasset with Dorothy Mackaill, originally of the cinema, as its star.

Miss Mackaill was a wise choice for the role of Carole Arden, the glamorous motion picture [illegible] whose attempts to vamp a handsome small-town filling station attendant away from [illegible] form the essence of the [illegible]. She not only looked the [illegible] wearing the exaggerated [illegible] costumes of the [illegible] with the [illegible] most sincere [illegible] because of her long [illegible] with Hollywood [illegible].

* * *

S[illegible] who plays opposite Miss Mackaill is likewise an appropriate [illegible] for the [illegible] who is the innocent victim of Miss Arden's designs. Kolk [illegible] dark and handsome [illegible] plays his part as the innocent object of the movie vamp's affections with great intelligence.

Most of the action of the piece takes place in the living room of the home of the Struthers family, on Route [illegible] between Scranton and Wilkesbarre, Pennsylvania. Miss Arden has just finished making a personal appearance at Scranton and her expensive foreign motor car breaks down in front of the Struthers residence, since the depression a tourist rest.

* * *

The temperamental picture star runs the gamut of emotions in the Struthers parlor, screaming at her manager, maid and chauffeur, until she gets a glimpse of the beautiful specimen of manhood who fixes automobiles and makes himself generally useful around the place. The fact that the young girl of the Struthers family is engaged to the young man in question has no deterrent effect on Carole Arden and she convinces him that a trip to the coast in her car is the proper thing for him if he wants to sell a sound invention he has to picture officials.

The interference of Miss Arden's manager, who realizes that his charge is only temporarily infatuated with the gas station attendant, the nosiness of an old aunt of the Struthers household and the constancy and love of the boy's fiancee prevent his taking the perilous Hollywood trek. And there are almost too many laughs for comfort connected with this action.

An especially competent group of players support Miss Mackaill and Mr. Kolk in this play. Lois Hall's realistic characterization of a movie-struck adolescent is outstanding and Leona Roberts gives an amusing and artistic portrayal of the old aunt. Flora Campbell, Elizabeth Kennedy, Lyle Bettger, Nell McFee Skinner, William Cragin and Margaret Remick all give fine performances in supporting roles.

Navy Born On Boston Program

"Navy Born," featuring Claire Dodd, and "The Last Outlaw," with Hoot Gibson, Harry Carey and Margaret Callahan, are the screen attractions scheduled for the RKO Boston Theater starting Thursday.

Gargon is seen as a young naval aviator in "Navy Born." Miss Dodd plays a wealthy, haughty girl who quarrels with Gargan over the possession of a two-weeks-old baby, the child of a deceased buddy of the officers.

Miss Dodd is interested in seeing her aunt have the child, its mother having been her sister. When a gangster kidnaps the child, who has been giving the aviator quite a bit of trouble, plenty of excitement results with a race up among the clouds as a climax.

"The Last Outlaw" is a Western drama which contains all sorts of mad action, fast fights, automobile chases and gun battles. The reason for all these thrills is the determination of an old Western desperado to wipe out a mob of modern gangsters who have invaded his town.

Harry B. Walthal is cast as an old-time sheriff who joins the "last outlaw" in cleaning up the place of city gangsters. Hoot Gibson and Margaret Callahan supply the love interest and others in the cast are Tom Tyler, Russell Hopton, Frank M. Thomas, Ray Mayer and Harry Jans.

Maine Cast In 'Russet Mantle'

Ogunquit, Me., July 21—The opening of "Russet Mantle," featuring Morgan Farley and Charlotte Walker, was the topic of much favorable comment here today following a performance attended by smartly gowned society groups.

Evidence of the appreciation of the play and the cast was shown by the large turnout at the Playhouse, despite the rain and wet roads.

The audience greeted the performances of Miss Walker and Mr. Morgan with much enthusiasm and were delighted with the play itself and the supporting cast.

Miss Walker, a native of the South, portrayed Mrs. Rowley, with Rosemary Ames, motion picture actress, as her difficult daughter. Daisy Atherton and Thomas W. Ross were convincing as Mr. and Mrs. Kincaid while Harry Bellaver of the original cast played Pablo.

The supporting cast included John Griggs, Violet Besson, William Swetland, Ivan Triesault and Betty Bricher.

Noble Sissle Coming to Ritz

Noble Sissle, internationally known band leader will bring his musicians and featured entertainers to the Ritz-Carlton Roof tonight for a limited engagement.

Sissle's band, which has enjoyed long engagements at the Les Ambassadeurs in Paris, Ciros Club in London, Hotel D Paris at Monte Carlo and the French Casino in New York and Chicago, is noted for its versatility and unique dance arrangements.

Leona Horne, torch singer, Billy Banks, mimic and Buddy Doyle, dancing comedian, are the performers who will entertain between dance numbers.

Sissle and his band will be heard over WNAC and the Columbia network every Tuesday and Friday evening from 11 30 to midnight during their Boston engagement.

Knapp Death In Plane Tip Wins $25

BY THE NEWS TIP EDITOR

Strangled by a gas line while practicing forced landings at a Beverly flying field Orville Knapp, prominent orchestra leader, crashed to death.

Another pilot at the Beverly field witnessed the crash and telephoned the Boston Evening American. For this story, printed first in this newspaper, he received this week's first prize of $25 in the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser news tip contest.

Proxy Marriage Suit Faces Shift

Taunton, July 21—If Herbert Mansfield wishes to annul his proxy marriage to Gloria Rego, of Providence, he will have to file his petition in Barnstable county.

Registrar of Probate Guilford Hathaway refused to receive a petition on the ground the petitioner Mansfield's mother was a resident of Barnstable county.

SEYMOUR SHOZE

By ART MOGER

1—Is Kay Linaker making her screen "debut" in "Easy Money"?
2—How is Onslow Stevens rated in Hollywood: A STAR, FEATURE PLAYER, EXTRA?
3—Did Michael Whalen ever appear on the screen with Shirley Temple?
4—Which studio has Rochelle Hudson under contract? Fox, Warner Bros., Columbia?
5—What theater in Boston features a nationally-known organist?

Continuing its very successful summer-policy of presenting the finest two pictures available at bargain prices, the management of the RKO Keith-Memorial Theater points with pride to its newest attractions, beginning Thursday. Onslow Stevens and Kay Linaker will be seen in the romantic-thriller, and allurlng Rochelle Hudson and handsome Michael Whalen are featured in "White Fang." A musical program with Hayden at the organ, news and short subjects complete this diversified bill.

There are a good many more days left before summer will be over. But there is no time like the present to hop aboard the profitable Seymour Shoze bandwagon. The Boston Evening American is distributing to the winners of this fascinating series 100 form-fitting BVD swim-suits—exactly the style you've always admired! Other prizes are 20 dozen D. & M. golf-balls, theater tickets and cash.

In order to avoid delay in the delivery of the winners' swim-suits, please specify the size you desire. This rule must be followed or else the contestant's entry shall not be considered for a swim-suit award. If you prefer the famous D. & M. golfballs to the famous BVD swim-suits, state this in your entry also.

See Seymour Shoze, and see your name as a winner on Monday.

LEWIS HANEY ON POLITICS

Radicals All Offer
AN ABUNDANT LIFE
As Sure Cure-All

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, July 21—Norman Thomas, perennial candidate of the Socialist party, addressed the Townsendites assembled at Cleveland. It is reported that he was roundly booed and you may well wonder why this should be, since all these queer people have so much in common.

Perhaps the very fact that the same group cheered Coughlin, despite the fact that the collarless priest called Mr. Roosevelt a "liar," is sufficient evidence of commonness. It ought to be easy for anybody who can swallow Coughlin, Townsend, and Huey Long doctrines, all at the same time, to see the beauties of Socialism.

It is so important, however, that we should all realize the essential similarities among these various radicals that I am going to list them as follows:

(1)—They all confine their appeal to limited classes—old folks, wage earners, or would-be "kings."

(2)—The essential appeal is to discontent. It is an appeal to those who are dissatisfied with what they have, and to have the "have-nots."

(3)—To these, they all promise a more abundant life by means which will not put them to any great trouble. In short, the something-for-nothing appeal is prominent.

(4)—To make this appeal seem more reasonable and to save their faces, they accuse sombody or other of "exploitation." Now it is "the capitalists," now "the international banker," now greed and privilege, that are responsible for keeping the "have-nots" out of the more abundant life.

(5)—They all propose some panacea which will do away with exploitation, and give everybody abundant life. The childish idea that by joining some new organization and subjecting ourselves to a different set of "leaders," we can win abundance and security, is held by all.

Thomas says, let's have a Socialist state, with industry run by the government. Townsend says, let's have a heavy tax and give the proceeds to old persons. Coughlin says, let's print more paper currency.

(6)—Thus they all deal with the subject of money. Townsend would take money away from everybody to give to the aged, but he would give so much that he would be forced to resort to printing (as Thomas Truly argues). Coughlin would make no bones against it and would print up a lot of "crisp paper currency." The Socialist ideal is to resort to tickets based upon labor time.

You see, they all reject the system of free exchange of goods and services according to market value. According to that system, we have to produce goods and services and sell them to others, in order to earn our incomes. This makes a sound money necessary to serve as a standard of values. These radicals all promise to give something for nothing, so they want to get rid of a standard of value.

(7)—They all disagree fundamentally with one another's concrete schemes. Coughlin, Townsend, and the Rev. Smith are trying to gang up in order to pool their followers' votes and raise more money. But they are obviously insecure and the priest has called Townsend's scheme "economic insanity." Thomas, who is the most honest of the bunch, frankly says it is a quack remedy, and will have nothing to do with it.

And, strange as it may seem, they one and all attack their fellow radical, Mr. Roosevelt. He also swats "privilege" and promises the more abundant life to forgotten men. He also passes around cheap currency and flouts the system of free exchange and a standard of value. But he is in power and they are "out." They want to put him out, so they can get in.

That is the whole story now. Each would-be radical "leader" wants to head an organization, collect dues from the members, and gain power for himself.

What saps we are!

OUTLOOK For Business BETTER
LETDOWN EXPECTED

By LESLIE GOULD
International News Service Financial Writer

New York, July 21 (INS) — With July two thirds gone, the outlook now is for the best summer since 1930 and possibly 1929 in many lines. So far business has held up much better than even some of the more optimistic forecasts.

There probably will be some letdown before Labor Day—there always is—but from present indications it will hold well within seasonal bounds—probably less than that.

August will probably be the letdown month. In the past it usually has been July and August. A factor in a slowing down of activity in August will be preparation of new models by the auto industry.

Production on new models is scheduled by some of the leading makers to start in September. Others may not get going until October, so that September may be a little slow, comparatively.

* * *

Here is the way leading business indices line up at this time:

Steel, just a few points under the peak levels of the year. The peak is 74 per cent of capacity, and current operations are around 68 per cent. This is the highest rate for July for the industry since 1929.

Here's the way the steel rate has gone in July since 1929:

1929	95 per cent
1930	57 per cent
1931	32 per cent
1932	15 per cent
1933	56 per cent
1934	28 per cent
1935	44 per cent
1936	68 per cent

* * *

Electric power consumption—the highest in the history of the industry, was even better than 1929's record. Consumption currently is better than 2 billion kilowatt hours, while in the summer of 1929 the "peak" is one billion 750 million kilowatt hours.

Here's how the power figures compare in July since 1929:

1929	1,750 million
1930	1,667 million
1931	1,645 million
1932	1,434 million
1933	1,648 million
1934	1,648 million
1935	1,766 million
1936	2,029 million

Graham-Paige

Factory sales of Graham cars in first half of July were 85 per cent higher than the corresponding period of July last year, F. R. Valpey, vice-president and general manager stated.

CHINA In Financial REFORM
LIGHTENING OF TAXES

Shanghai, July 21 (AP) — A reformation of South China's fiscal structure was the immediate concern today of victorious central government officials.

The national government confirmed the appointment of T. L. Soong, brother of famed T. V. Soong, president of the Bank of China, as finance commissioner of Kwangtung Province, of which Canton is capital.

He was charged with the task of lightening Kwangtung taxes and bringing the provincial financial problem within the national framework.

Finance spokesmen said successful control over Kwangtung would not only benefit provincials but also would increase national revenues since the outgoing Chan Chaitong regime condoned evasion of customs duties, especially on foreign oils and automobiles.

The addition of southern aircraft to Nanking forces obviated the necessity of early purchases of light fighting planes by the national government.

Spokesmen state, however, that Nanking was prepared to assume outstanding payments on planes en route or ordered by Kwangtung from America.

Tokyo, July 21 (AP)—A reported Chinese-American credit agreement for purchase by China of airplanes, automobiles and railroad equipment, was featured in vernacular newspapers today.

The dispatches from Shanghai said such an agreement had been signed at the American consulate July 15 by T. V. Soong, president of the Bank of China, and a United States financial representative, Arthur Campbell.

The newspaper Nichi Nichi looked on the reported agreement as a menace to Japanese interests, stating that "since the credit was virtually used to bolster China's national defense, Japan cannot overlook it."

Many of the dispatches said this latest transaction was linked to the program for purchase of Chines silver by the United States recently concluded in Washington.

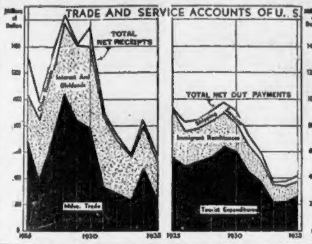

"This pact contains further provisions which will surprise e Japan," the Nichi Nichi correspondent declared.

No comment was available from official spokesmen, although the newspapers stated the Tokyo foreign office had ordered Japanese officials in China to investigate the reported agreement.

Profits Higher

Sutherland Paper Co. reports for June quarter of 1936 net profit of $242,047, equal to 84 cents a share (par $10) on 287,000 shares of common, against $152,157, or 53 cents a share in preceding quarter.

U. S. ACCOUNTS

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, July 21—Among the factors advanced for the recent greater popularity of Consolidated Edison, formerly Consolidated Gas, common is a belief that prospects are more favorable for an increase in the dividend than at any previous time since the last reduction in the rate.

Wall Street is guessing that the rate will be boosted to either $1.80 or $2 a share annually before the end of the year. The dividend now amounts to $1 a share a year. According to one source, the company has been increasing customers at the rate of 300,000 annually.

* * *

New Efficiency Seen Rail Aid

Despite the fact that railroad freight revenue per ton mile may be lowered by eventual expiration of the emergency surcharges, and by lowering of rates to meet motor truck competition, increased efficiency of operation is seen by Goodbody & Co. as a substantial offset for such reductions. The company says: "The real importance of this increased efficiency may be shown by two examples: Baltimore & Ohio had total operating expenses, excluding maintenance, of 44.6 per cent of gross in 1935 as against 47.3 per cent in 1931, despite the fact that gross was lower by 10 per cent. The indicated saving of 2.7 per cent is equal to $1.49 per share on the basis of 1935 gross and $1.67 and $2.34, respectively, at the 1931 and 1929 levels. This compares with a share loss from rate reductions in a year like 1929 of $3.96. Similarly, for Pere Marquette, the indicated share savings from increased efficiency are $3.67, $3.52 and $5.41, respectively, at the 1935, 1931 and 1929 levels of traffic, as against a share loss from rate reductions of $4.56."

Public Appetite for Aviation Stocks

Aviation stocks at the moment seem to have won strong public favor. Not only are the listed aviation issues rising, but the public offering of Seversky Aircraft Corporation stock emphasized that the public appetite is big for such securities. The Seversky offering of 200,000 shares was 8 to 10 times oversubscribed before the issue even was advertised, it is understood. What made the stock particularly attractive probably was the announcement preceding the offering that the company had a rather sizable government order.

* * *

Open Market for Stock Immediately

The Seversky offering also was interesting to the professional Wall street element for other reasons besides the heavy demand. The stock was immediately "free" after the allotments were made. Dealers or public buyers could do as they pleased with their stock, contrasted with the usual compulsory agreement tieing up dealers to hold the stock for a specified period of time after allotment of their share. The Seversky stock immediately went to a premium in the open market over the counter. There was no syndicate in the offering, merely a group of invited dealers. Furthermore—also a recent precedent, it is claimed by the sponsors — dealers received their commission immediately upon their payment for stock. Dealers frequently have had to wait weeks, sometimes months, for full payment of commissions. The company received net $3 a share from the offering, made at $3.75 a share.

Gross Up

Gross revenues of Union Pacific Railroad Co. for the first six months were approximately 15 per cent above the like period a year ago, according to W. A. Harriman, chairman. This indicates gross of $64,500,000, against $56,111,249 reported for the 1935 first half.

TRADE, SERVICE
Favorable Balance Less

The Finance Division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce recently published a preliminary annual estimate of our balance of international payments.

One of the important items that make up the balance of international payments are trade and service accounts. The chart shows the trade and service accounts of the United States since 1925.

The left-hand side of the chart shows the three major items that make up the total net receipts of the United States from foreign countries. The right-hand side of the chart shows the three major items that make up our total payments to foreign countries.

Merchandise trade is shown as the excess of exports over imports. In 1935 this balance was $234,000,000. With the exception of 1933 this was the smallest balance since 1925. Similarly, interest and dividends on foreign investments have declined to $286,000,000 in 1935, lowest since 1925.

The favorable balance of our trade and service accounts (total net receipts minus total net out payments), was $147,000,000 in 1935, compared with $725,000,000 in 1928.

AFRICAN Gold Sent TO U. S.
RUSHED VIA LONDON

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service

New York, July 21 (US) — While monetary theorists debate as to whether the New Deal policy of raising the price of an ounce of gold from $20.67 to $35 has been helpful to the United States, there can be no doubt that it has proved a boon to the Union of South Africa.

Gold mining is the principal industry of South Africa, and the people have been realistic in rushing their output of the precious metal via London to the best international market, namely, the United States.

Curiously enough, the gold-minded union is not at the moment on the gold standard. Its currency is on a sterling basis, which [illegible] managed currency standard.

Long a debtor country, [illegible] importing capital from overseas, chiefly from Great Britain, South Africa has used the gold boom of the last three years to reduce the pressure of debts. According to British banking observations, South Africa used the income from gold not only to settle adverse merchandise balances, but also to reduce her external debts.

This is the very reverse of what the United States has done. This country has taken in unprecedented amounts of gold and created debts to pay for them—either in the form of short term bank liabilities to foreigners or in the form of an export of dollar foreign bonds or of securities of American corporations.

By August, 1934, [illegible] had retired the balance of [illegible] millions in pounds sterling of South Africa's war debt to the British government, and subsequently paid off millions of government securities privately held in England. In order to get control of the foreign exchange to pay off external debts, the Union of South Africa floated internal loans with her own people and levied taxes.

Incidentally, such shifting of external into internal obligations suggests a technique whereby the debtor governments of the United States treasury could pay off the defaulted war debt. Nationals of Great Britain and France particularly own substantial amounts of dollar securities.

These could be mobilized by their respective governments and used as a means of paying off the war debt in part, obviating the difficulties of international transfer. Then the foreign governments could reimburse their own nationals by giving them domestic funds raised by the flotation of internal bonds in the home market.

To some extent, India, too, has used the boom in gold as a means of reducing external indebtedness. Indian gold export came mainly from the disposal of personal accumulations.

From a longer term outlook, it may be significant that important British possessions are eager to take advantage of our current monetary policy to liquidate all the gold we will take. Perhaps this fact gives some clue as to British monetary intentions for the future.

ETHEL WATERS ON AIR

By N. F. T.

Out in Detroit, where Ben "Old Maestro" Bernie is broadcasting (WBZ) tonight come 9 o'clock, the brown-skinned torch tune songstress named Ethel Waters will occupy the network spotlight.

Ben and his tin can sponsored band boys, called "all the lads," are stopping over in the home town of Joe Louis while trekking across the country en route to New York from the West coast. Ethel promises to contribute her highly specialized version of "Stormy Weather," the song sensation of 1934-35 and for the striking success of which piece her vocal styling was accorded most of the credit.

"N. F. T."

There's a finely fashioned moving spirit of comedy attending the Monday evening "Fibber McGee and Molly" feature. And what's more, methinks most listeners who heard their mirthful 30 minutes last night will agree that it is certainly one among not too many current air attractions that actually result with loudspeaker patrons laughing on into the next program period.

* * *

And a local lass demonstrating real soloing class in our Hub sound sanctum circles, is Maria Forbes, the WBZ staff songstress. Her regular Sunday morning quarter hour at 11:30 a. m. is exceptionally well designed and pleasing.

Maria likewise helps to make the "Little Show" the peppy half hour highlight that it is every day at noon through WBZ-WBZA channels.

Down the WMEX waves hereabouts this evening, when it's time for the "Sons of Union Veterans" effort, Col. Frederic G. Bauer, authority on military court martial procedure, takes a microphone turn. He will treat the question "Was Dr. Mudd one of the J. Wilkes Booth Conspirators?" with a view to clarifying the historic problem which confronted the nation following the assassination of Abraham Lincoln.

FILM FAVORITE

Anna Sten, Russian film star, plans to make her American radio debut as guest artist of the "Caravan" doing (WNAC) tonight at 9:30 p. m.

Miss Sten is to be heard in a dramatization of Fodor's play, "I Love an Actress." The weekly Caravan hour show also will be headlined by Frank Forrest, tenor, in a return engagement.

Forrest is a radio "discovery" of Rupert Hughes, the "Caravan" master of ceremonies, who happened to hear the young tenor singing in a nearby studio a few weeks ago.

MILL SUCCESS

Goodall WORSTED SETS Records

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

As the once proud Amoskeag Manufacturing Company sinks toward industrial oblivion another great New England mill is closing the finest year in its history.

The Goodall Worsted Company of Sanford, Maine, will close the books on its fiscal year the 31st of the month after an extraordinarily successful year during which output and profits will exceed all previous records.

The success of the Goodall is a tribute to fine management and a product which caught the public's fancy through skillful merchandising. Makers of renowned Palm Beach cloth, the company not only manufactures the fabric, but ships it to plants at Cincinnati and Knoxville where it is made up into suits.

* * *

The management's alertness and determination to resist smug self-satisfaction over past successes was forcibly demonstrated last January. At that time the new Palm Beach cloth necktie was introduced to the trade through retail outlets in southern resorts. An immediate sensation, this new product resulted in swelling Goodall's business in surprising fashion. Sixty looms are now devoted to production of this fine weave cloth and 1,000,000 of the new neckties have been sold this year and the expectation is for a sale next year of at least 3,000,000. And behind the scenes stand about 1000 workers who have had 52 weeks of work on a double-shift basis of 40 hours per week.

* * *

Notebook: As for Goodall's earnings it is only possible to make an approximation at this time . . . But some of the over-counter traders say a figure of $8 per share is likely . . . And with the new tax laws they expect distribution of a big part of net profits . . . Many months ago this writer advised the purchase of Goodall for long term holding . . . The advice has been repeated on several occasions and is again . . . Delaware & Hudson looks like a well situated rail from the standpoint of both chart and tape readers . . . Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway preferred is a stock that we think should be bought and held.

* * *

With the exception of certain specialties we doubt if this is the right place to do much new buying of stocks. Nothing this writer has ever heard or read absolutely prohibits the purchase of stocks after a steep rise. Yet the fact remains New York and way station markets have witnessed rising prices for two consecutive weeks. A dip may never come, but by every sound tenet of investment and trading it does seem new purchases might well wait for a reactionary spell. And with certain reservations we will do just that.

* * *

Ticker Talk: As one who bears Celanese a grudge the writer is watching current tape and chart action carefully for indications that a rise of good proportions is about to begin . . . The industry is in good shape and the public after the disappointments of last fall and winter are thoroughly squeezed out of the stock . . . Few observers agree but it seems to us the tape action of farm implement shares is saying the decline of the group is ended . . . Steels have been out of the running lately and may be giving a signal that a reaction is impending . . . We would watch them.

PLATE GLASS Output Higher

Production of polished plate glass by members of the Plate Glass Manufacturers of America for June was 15,243,665 square feet, against 19,192,114 square feet in May and 13,162,515 square feet in June, 1935.

Total production for six months amounted to 102,080,318 square feet, against 88,363,275 square feet in the first half of 1935.

STOCKS Move UPWARD

MANY NEW HIGHS SET

New York, July 21 (INS) — The stock market moved irregularly higher today, after hesitating in mixed trading at the start.

Wall Street paid little heed to the Spanish revolt and to closing of the Japanese security markets following heavy liquidation on reports of drastic Treasury Department plans there.

Coppers, rubbers and rail shares led the way upward, a number of new peaks for the year being set in the general list and gains running to more than a point being chalked up.

Strength in coppers reflects the strong price situation, with domestic quotations for the red metal today reaching 9¾ cents a pound, the highest in five years. Anaconda and Kennecott spurted into new high ground for the year.

Reports of another increase in car loadings for last week spurred rail issues, Southern Pacific leading with a runup of more than a point to a new 1936 top. Atchison rose nearly 2 points.

Goodrich advanced more than a point, and Goodyear and U. S. Rubber almost as much.

Bonds were mixed. Grains were steady, while cotton gained 50 cents a bale.

Current Topics

The ultimate effect of the drouth on securities was being studied by market analysts.

Despite crop damage in the north and middle west, officials of chain store organizations serving these areas were said to be optimistic over fall earnings prospects. Higher prices for farm products, together with government relief outlays, were expected to help maintain sales volumes.

Holders of textile stocks displayed interest in the Federal trade commission survey disclosing that of 254 woolen and worsted companies, all but those in the dyeing and finishing group operated at a higher rate of return on investment for the six-month period ended June 20, 1935, than for the entire year of 1934.

The French franc, at the beginning of foreign exchange transactions, was up .00 1-6 of a cent at 6.62⅝ cents, and sterling was unchanged at $5.02⅞.

Comments of Brokers

We continue to find further evidence that confirms the broadening of the recovery pattern, indicating a return towards normal balanced industrial activity.—R. S. Feigus, Prentice, Blouner & Brady.

The action of the market as a whole continues favorable to an early extension of the broad advance. Favor a constructive trading policy, especially on minor setbacks hereabouts in individual issues.—H. D. Comer, Paine Webber & Co.

There is nothing to indicate any change in the position of the investment market at the present time.—F. H. Richardson, Southgate & Co.

We feel that we may now witness a temporary technical reaction. The main reason we suggest a more cautious attitude toward the market is due to the indifferent attitude of some of the market leaders.—Berry Grant —Hornblower & Weeks.

It seems logical to expect that any general reaction will be deferred and the worst one need fear is irregularity coused by profit-taking and switching.—J. S. Wilson—Josephthal & Co.

Seasonal trade influences will be offset for the next several weeks by favorable second quarter reports and expectations of increased and extra dividends, so that there is no reason to abandon bullish policy.—J. P. Maher —Shields & Co.

FAILURES DECLINE

For Fourth Successive Week

A further recession in failures held the total in the United States to the lowest level in sixteen years for the fourth consecutive week.

The aggregate for the week ended Thursday, July 16, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., was 136, against 140 in the week preceding, and 209 a year ago. This downward action is seasonal, to some extent, but it has been far more uniform than in either 1934 or 1935.

Insolvencies with liabilities of $5000 and over, in each instance, numbered 74 for the latest week, a drop of 3 from the total of the week preceding. For the comparative week of 1935 these cases totalled 126.

In the Dominion of Canada the number of insolvencies which occurred for the week was 21, compared with 25 in the week previous. A year ago the total was 27.

The weekly record of business failures in the United States with figures for the corresponding weeks in both years, is given below:

1935 Broadcasting Net $86,492,653

Washington, July 21 (US)—The nation's broadcasting stations and networks had a total net revenue of $86,492,653 in 1935, according to a business census report made public today.

Revenue for the sale of radio time was divided as follows:

National and regional networks, $39,737,867; national and regional spot advertising (non-network), $13,805,200; local advertising, $26,074,476. other revenue, including sale of talent, totaled $6,875,110.

Broadcast stations sold $39,879,676 worth of time and received $12,521,832 from networks as payment for carrying network commercial programs. They received $26,074,476 from local advertisers and $13,805,200 from national and regional advertisers who "spotted" their advertising—that is, purchased time directly from individual stations.

Holds Sales Gain

National Acm Co. has continued to hold its gain in sales and net profits that started last year with prospects for the remainder of the year exceedingly good on the basis of orders now on hand.

INDIAN Cotton POSITION

DISTRIBUTION AT HIGH RATE

New York, July 21 — India, the second largest cotton-growing country of the world, continues to distribute cotton out of stocks in that country at a relatively high rate, according to the New York Cotton Exchange Service.

Latest available statistics on distribution of Indian cotton confirm previous indications that the total stock of Indian cotton in all hands in India at the end of the current season, on July 31, will be well below average.

The Exchange Service says that during May, the latest month for which statistics are available, consumption of Indian cotton by mills of India was the largest on record for that month, and exports by India, although smaller than last year and the year previous, were well above average.

Consumption in May totaled 231,000 bales, compared with an average of 188,000 in May during the past five years. Exports totaled 398,000 bales, compared with a five-year average of 307,000. Thus total distribution was 629,000 bales, as against a five-year average of 495,000.

Ten Months

During the ten months of the season ending in May, Indian mills consumed a total of 2,232,000 bales of Indian cotton, compared with an average of 1,976,000 in the same period in the previous five years. Exports by India aggregated 3,087,000 bales, as against a five-year average of 2,422,000. Thus total distribution by India in the ten months through May aggregated 5,319,000 bales, compared with a five-year average of 4,398,000.

In consequence of this large distribution during the current season, stocks of Indian cotton in all hands in India at end of May were well below average. They totaled 2,359,000 bales, as against an average of 2,651,000 on the same dates in the previous five years. A significant fact is that stocks have been reduced to this subnormal level notwithstanding the fact that India produced this season one of the largest crops on record. Its production this season was about 6,100,000 bales, exclusive of cotton for household use, as compared with a five-year average of 5,200,000 bales.

At the end of last season, or, in other words, the beginning of this season, the total stock of Indian cotton in India was much below average, at 1,578,000 bales, as compared with an average of 1,845,000 in the previous five years. Unless distribution by India in June and July should prove to have fallen off sharply, present indications are that stocks at the end of this season will be about in line with the subnormal stock at the end of last season.

London, July 21 (AP)—Bar gold advanced 2 pence to 138s. 9d. (Sterling price equivalent to $34.88.)

Washington Notebook

Washington, July 21 (AP)—Federal Reserve Board statistics reveal a sharp contrast between bank failures in the last 18 months and those of the peak-depression era.

Since Jan. 1, 1935, through last June 30 a total of 60 banks in the United States closed their doors. Aggregate deposits were $14,209,000. This is in contrast with thousands of failures annually, with deposit liabilities of billions.

Four national banks have failed in the last year and a half, all of which closed their doors in 1935. Non-member insured banks have failed to the number of 47, while nine other non-member institutions have been forced to suspend . . . State bank members of the Federal Reserve System have been entirely free of failures over this period.

Uniformity now appears to be the keynote of discount rates at the various Federal Reserve banks . . . These institutions began the new fiscal year with the flat rate of 2 per cent at all 12 banks with two exceptions—New York and Cleveland, where a 1½ per cent rate is employed . . . The last change in rates occurred more than a year ago when Minneapolis lowered its rate from 2½ to 2 per cent . . .

Ten different kinds of money are now in circulation in the United States . . . Federal Reserve notes make up the bulk of the approximate $6,000,000,000 now in circulation, being responsible for more than $4,000,000,000. Silver certificates are next with $955,000,000, followed in order by National bank notes, subsidiary silver, United States notes, minor coin, gold certificates, Reserve bank notes, silver dollars and treasury notes of 1890.

THIRD QUARTER

Will BUSINESS GO Ahead?

By B. C. FORBES

Stocks opened the week with a bound. What has generated the bullishness Wall Street has exhibited every day during the last fortnight?

In the financial world it is peculiarly true that "nothing succeeds like success." Speculative movements proverbially rush to extremes.

The momentum already attained is probably largely responsible for continuation of the lively advance. Ordinary dabblers in stocks usually reason that a demonstration of strength is solid ground for expecting still further strength. When a relapse sets in, they rush to the conclusion that the downswing will continue.

Curiously, people like to buy everything else at the lowest available prices, but the majority are always more eager to buy securities when they are high than when they are low.

The most successful heavyweight traders in stocks are influenced more by prospects than by past performances. Wise anticipation is the key to speculative profits.

My guess is that most of the present buying is stimulated by accomplished facts rather than studious diagnosis of the outlook.

Second-quarter financial statements are nearly all favorable. Almost all dividend changes are upwards, and speculation is being nurtured by what it has been feeding on—day after day advances.

But are third-quarter corporation reports likely to be more favorable?

I doubt it.

* * *

Signs of recession can be detected here and there. Activity unquestionably has been quickened lately by spending by recipients of upwards of a billion dollars in bonus money. This spending is petering out.

Steel buying has been prodded by fears of widespread labor troubles.

That the rise in the majority of stocks has outrun the rise in business cannot be questioned.

Neither can it be questioned that the bottom has been reached by money rates, and that an upward trend has set in. Should this stiffening process continue, government bonds will not be the only investments affected.

It should be added that, even were economic activity to slacken and money rates to harden, optimism doubtless would develop should political trends agreeable to the financial, industrial, business world materialize.

It is essentially a time for weighing of factors rather than for blind bullish speculation.

X-RAY

Examination and consultation absolutely FREE to all who call before July 28th. The X-ray and mercury quartz light treatment is accomplishing wonders in diseases of every description. No matter what your disease, Daniel J. Walsh, M. D., fulfills the above offer.

ASTHMA

Mrs. Patrick Geary, 59 Webster Ave., Somerville, Mass., says:—"For 10 years I had spent sleepless nights from asthmatic attacks, as well as miserable days. Mrs. Donovan of Somerville told me of Dr. Walsh and how he had helped her and I had Dr. Walsh treat me. Every day I say a prayer for Dr. Walsh. His treatment has done so much for me that I can never forget him. I make this statement that others who suffer as I did may go to Dr. Walsh and be helped, too." Signed Mrs. Patrick Geary.

THE Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, who has traveled widely in this country and who comes into contact with people in all walks of life, has unusual opportunities far gauging the trend of public opinion.

To a Universal Service Correspondent in Chicago, he recently said:

"There is a definite, vigorous trend toward conservatism. The people are certainly off of all things Socialistic and Communistic.

"My recent travels have convinced me Roosevelt will not be re-elected.

"Despite the semi-conservatism of the Roosevelt platform, there is widespread belief he does not keep his promises or platform pledges.

"The people will not stand for this dictatorship. Anybody who plays the part of God stumbles before he reaches first base.

"Whether the people realize it or not, the democratic spirit is abroad in the land again."

There can be very little doubt in all thinking minds that what Father Coughlin here says is true.

All reports indicate that "THE DEMOCRATIC SPIRIT IS ABROAD IN THE LAND AGAIN."

And that means THE ELECTION OF GOVERNOR ALFRED M. LANDON TO THE PRESIDENCY.

Now It Is Spain, Too!

SPAIN today is a prey to the same forces of national disintegration that are working in France and Belgium.

This force, divested of its various self-invented names, is COMMUNISM.

Spain preceded France in the swing toward Communism. From the very day of the change Spain has been a tragic theater of assassinations, uprisings, plots and strikes until today no one's life or property seems safe in that country.

This illustrates, as it does in France, the danger of a REVOLUTIONARY MINORITY PARTY (for the Communists are in a minority both in France and Spain) ACHIEVING A BALANCE OF POWER.

And what has happened in France and Spain CAN happen here.

There is no danger that the people of this country will ever deliberately vote Communists into national place and power.

But there is ALWAYS DANGER that a radical Leftist group, by achieving a balance of power in Congress, will bring to life those birds of ill-omen—the violent Communistic group—which have made of democratic France and the newly democratic Spain such tragic spectacles.

To be CONSCIOUS OF THIS DANGER is to tighten up our AMERICANISM.

Mr. Garner's Muzzle

VICE-PRESIDENT GARNER, returning from a fishing trip in Texas, told reporters:

"I have never talked about national affairs. I leave that to the boss."

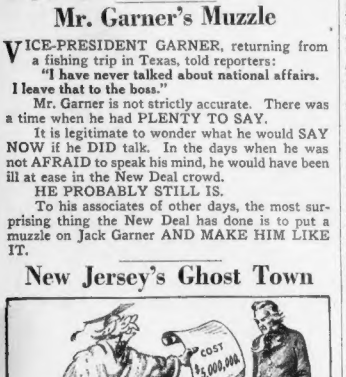

Mr. Garner is not strictly accurate. There was a time when he had PLENTY TO SAY.

It is legitimate to wonder what he would SAY NOW if he DID talk. In the days when he was not AFRAID to speak his mind, he would have been ill at ease in the New Deal crowd.

HE PROBABLY STILL IS.

To his associates of other days, the most surprising thing the New Deal has done is to put a muzzle on Jack Garner AND MAKE HIM LIKE IT.

New Jersey's Ghost Town

In the sun-baked fields of Monmouth County, N. J., stands Tugwell Town, that "model town" which by now was to be inhabited by laughing, happy families.

It was built under the direction of Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, original "braintruster," who thought it up all by himself. Its vital statistics follow:

Cost: $5,000,000; inhabitants, few; future, uncertain.

Nothing much there is ready. Except the decision to tear down the $5,000,000 plant which was to turn out more "model homes." That much is ready and gone—$5,000,000.

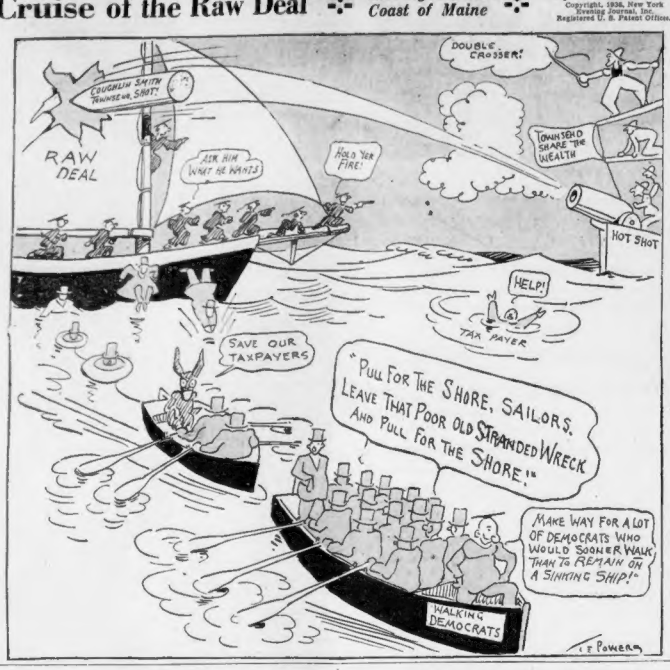

Meanwhile Dr. Tugwell, who started to teach the East how and where it ought to live, is in the Middle West teaching REAL farmers what they ought to do when rain doesn't fall.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

O. O.McIntyre

New York, July 21—Bugs Baer, like most accomplished after-dinner speakers, had no short cut to oratorical deftness. His first time out at an affair in Washington, D. C., his home town, was resputedly a blundering, blushing effort which narrowly escaped the raspberry.

Crownshield. Cobb and others so finished in forensics went through the same travail.

Speakers are made, not born. Even Bryan was a dud in his trial efforts. Baer today may not be the flowerest but he is the fastest man on his banquet feet in New York. The trigger man!

His is a mind that sparks epigrams—those obvious Whistler-like spots that make one wonder: "Why didn't I think of that?" Super-sensitive, Baer often sulks at the imagined grievance, and even close friends will suddenly receive a cool and aloof bow. But he quickly forgets.

The humorist is a man's man. He likes the crowds of the prize fight ring and wrestling arena. His grammatical fixation is "ain't." He will not abandon it. Like that other apostle of ain't, Will Rogers, he believes: "A lot of folks who ain't sayin' ain't ain't eatin'."

For word beaglers: The word Oconomowoc, a town in Wisconsin, is the only five-syllabled word in the language containing five o's and no other vowels.

Beatrice Lillie always seems to me to express astonishingly her lovely last name. Tall, thin, chalk white, stem-like neck and apparently swaying ever so lightly in a vagrant breeze. As definitely as the Lunts, Miss Lillie is a vogue, a sort of cult, in New York. Those making her the No. 1 Show Stopper. To her worshippers, she is "Bee" and a target for rare devotion that comes to few people of the stage. And distinctly box office, too, my guess!

The passing of the Sultan of Sulu recently recalls to the club lounge gossipers, the visit of George Ade and John T. McCutcheon to that potentate on an outer fringe of the world some twenty years ago. And the play Ade wrote which bore the ruler's title and ran so many years. Not many newspapermen of his day—nor of this—traveled so extensively as Ade.

There are few parts of the world he has not touched. There are still drinks named for the humorist in Singapore, Sumatra and many other far places Reports are his biography which he is writing at his farm near Brook, Ind., is turning into the home stretch. It should be one of "the" travel books of the era.

Most of the gray heads, who like to remember-when over the vesperal hour highball always have rollicking tales to tell of George Ade, Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson. They had a reckless fling to their youth that does not seem to exist today. Their capers smacked of genius. And each one settled down at the proper time to give literature more than than perhaps any other three writers in America.

There used to be an 11 o'clock breakfast round-up for gentlemen of loose nights on the Ivy-clad verandah of the old Hotel Savoy on the avenue. It was called "The Mourner's Bench" and those soggy with penitence or taut with "second company" nerves would drift there for the revivifying perk of the cloudy absinthe drip, a specialty of the bar.

There was an unwritten credo that no one was to moan about his headache or prattle the usual doiors of remorse. Charles B. Dillingham was president of the circle which was, inappropriately enough, called "The Morning Glories."

The most pathetic hang-over I ever beheld was an American who dropped over a table in front of that famous 100-year-old tavern, Mere Catherine, in the leafy square of the Place du Terte in Montmarte three years ago. He had started to celebrate at noon the taking of a boat train for Cherbourg at 4 p. m. and here he was it —on the next day alone, broke, befuddled. Three of us asked if we could be of service. "Not unless you can share my hang-over among you!" he moaned.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Elsie Robinson

Should you give yourself or save yourself?

That's a common question in these high tension days, and hotly disputed. So hotly disputed that it has divided its debaters into two camps—the Savers and the Givers.

The Savers believe in taking care of themselves, conserving their energy and affections, guarding their lives against demands which may prove perilous, defending their rights against real or imaginary encroachments.

"Nobody will take care of you if you don't take care of yourself," the Savers say. "Nor appreciate you. If you're too good-natured—do what everyone asks —people will hold you cheap. No one respects an Easy Mark. Easy Marks always get it in the neck.

"And this," add the Savers, "applies to everything in life. Particularly love. Anyone's a fool who loves too generously. Never let the Other Fellow be too sure of you—him, or her, guessing. Never trust anyone too much.

BROKEN HEARTS

But the other camp, the Givers, reasons quite differently.

"Live life recklessly!" they cry. "Don't always be worrying about yourself. Don't always be fearing that something will happen to you or that someone will impose upon you.

"Give yourself! Give everything you can of yourself. Give all the work you can, all the faith you can, all the love you can. For you get out of life only what you put into it—you get in proportion to your giving. Giving may make you tired and angry and heartsick, but you always win in the long run. Every time you give, you grow bigger, stronger, wiser.

"People who GIVE themselves have wide, deep, rich lives. But people who save themselves shrink steadily. They dry up because they're cutting off their source of supply and nothing new comes into their hearts or their brains."

TO SAVE yourself? Or GIVE yourself?

REVIEW YOUR LIFE

There's one of the oldest arguments on earth. Cain and Abel started it . . . Cain, the cautious, who stinted his thanks offering to the Lord . . . Abel, the impulsive, who gave the best he had, robbing himself that the altar might be richly piled. God smiled on Abel and, in his envy, Cain killed him. Yet Abel lives on in the minds of men, rich and joyous because he triumphed over human pettiness. And outcast Cain wanders disconsolately down the lanes of time, wailing—

"MY PUNISHMENT IS GREATER THAN I CAN BEAR!"

Yet again another stood, with the shadow of the Cross athwart His trail, and heard men disputing whether it was better to give or to save oneself . . . to hoard life or spend it in magnificent generosity and heroism. And though He knew as well the awful price of giving, He cried that deathless answer—

"Whosoever will save his life shall lose it; but whosoever will lose his life . . . the same shall save it!"

TO SAVE YOURSELF? OR TO GIVE YOURSELF? LOOK BACK OVER YOUR OWN LIFE —WHICH QUARTER HAS PROVED THE BETTER BARGAIN FOR YOU?

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

The apparent attempt to assassinate King Edward VIII of England must have been the work of a lunatic. No man in his right mind would have undertaken such an infamous act. Of all the rulers on earth, King Edward is the last anyone would expect to be made the target for an assassin's bullet. There is no semblance of tyranny or despotism in his reign. He has the affection and confidence of his people and the admiration of the people of other nations. His escape from injury should be the occasion for world-wide thanksgiving.

Six billion dollars worth of gold bullion are to be stored by Uncle Sam in the new burglar proof vault which has been constructed at Fort Knox, Ky. The most elaborate precautions have been taken to safeguard this immense hoard. Any ordinary citizen who buried his money or hid it in a similar way would be denounced as a "hoarder" and a "miser." He would be held up to public ridicule and contempt by the very government which is hoarding gold.

What are we, as a nation, going to do with our billions of dollars of gold other than hoard it? We are told that this gold is "backing" for our money. But none of our money is redeemable in gold. No citizen is permitted to possess monetary gold. The government seizes and holds all the gold and does nothing with it but hoard it.

A horribly sickening story is the account of the execution of Mrs. Mary Frances Creighton, murderess, in Sing Sing prison Thursday night, unconscious from fear, she was taken to the electric chair in a wheel chair. For weeks, she had lain almost motionless on her prison cot, moaning and seemingly paralyzed. A special commission of five men, including four doctors, examined her and reported to Governor Lehman that her paralysis was mostly feigned and that she was physically well and normal mentally.

The mental torture suffered by Mrs. Creighton aroused a lot of sympathy for her. There is something revolting in the thought of society taking a human life under such circumstances. But the suffering of the woman who was poisoned by Mrs. Creighton and her paramour should not be forgotten. It is the victim of the poisoner, not the poisoner, who merits sympathy.

The revelation by the state Chamber of Commerce that government costs the people of California $900,000,000 dollars annually while the gross value of all the products of the soil in that state is only $827,000,000 should open the eyes of taxpayers. It is only because so many people labor under the delusion that they are not taxpayers that this condition is permitted to exist. Once the voters wake up to the fact that every person, whether he is a multi-millionaire or an unemployed man existing on a cash or work dole, has to pay a share of taxes, they will force drastic cuts in the cost of government.

U. S. Dream at Stake

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Edwin C. Hill

When Joseph interpreted Pharaoh's dream and told him about the seven lean years to come, Pharaoh asked him what could be done about it. Joseph told him to "look out for a man discreet and wise and set him over the land of Egypt."

Joseph also laid down rather a complete program of federalization, with "officers over the land," and recommended that in the seven fat years which preceded the lean years, Pharaoh should "take up the fifth part of the land of Egypt."

But Joseph was no believer in the "economics of scarcity." He didn't want to kill livestock or plough under crops. "And let them gather all the food of those years that come," he said, "and lay up corn under the hand of Pharaoh, and let them keep food in the cities." Joseph was probably the only successful brain-truster.

Pharaoh took his advice. "And the seven years of dearth began to come, according as Joseph had said: and the dearth was in all lands; but in the land of Egypt there was bread." The lean years were "withered, thin and blasted with the east wind." The corn fell before this devastating blast as it does today in our Mississippi Valley.

PROPHECY OF 1924

Good times came again and Egypt was rich with corn and wine. But now there are deserts and buried cities, waste and desolation where this drama of good times and bad times was played out to the end. It is a tale that is told. All this, with its epilogue of our own good and bad times, as told thousands of years later in newspaper headlines, was touched off by my memory of a wild-eyed soap-boxer, haranguing a crowd in midtown New York, in 1924.

He was a gaunt old man with a matted beard, shrill and vehement, offering some kind of a religious panacea for all our ills. I had forgotten just what it was. But the detail of interest now is that he was preaching from the fortieth chapter of Genesis, expounding Pharaoh's dream and Joseph's interpretation, and warning us that we were just then starting seven fat years, which would be followed by seven lean years.

He didn't quite hit the bull's eye of prophecy. We had only five fat years before 1929 and how long the lean ones will run will be anybody's bet. Next November we will have had just seven of them. Plous Republicans could argue that our fat years began in 1922, as we began to pull out of the depression, that they lasted just seven years, and the period of the seven lean years will be ended with the election of Landon, as the "man discreet and wise" of the Biblical story.

NEW ENGLAND WARNING

Poets, prophets, fabulists, eccentrics, mystics show up startlingly in the historical box score, on runs, hits, put-outs, and assists, as compared with men who add cubits to their stature by taking thought—scientists and economists, for instance. The "voice crying in the Wilderness" is forever heard and never heeded; often mistaken, sometimes plainly irrational, but often wise and prescinct.

So it was with gnarled, irascible, quarrelsome little Abel Spinney, of somewhere in New England, during the closing years of the Civil War. Old Abel, he was nearing seventy at the time, made a nuisance of himself protesting against the opening of the public domain for settlement without some enlightened policy of land conservation.

He had gone part way West with the Forty-niners and knew something about Mid-Western soil. He kept on screaming that if the Buffalo grass was scooped off and the soil ravished, it would all blow away in a few decades. He insisted that no man should be allowed to farm more than 60 acres of land, and that he must have capital sufficient to farm his land scientifically, maintain a rotation of crops and from time to time plant legumes which would provide restorative nitrates.

"LITTLE AMERICAN"

Traversing the Atlantic seaboard, often at Washington importuning Congress, he kicked up a fuss every once in a while which brought him a day or two in jail. He was an untidy, ill-favored little man, with a scraggly birdlike gray beard and a voice like a stripped gear. My elders used to tell me about him, with considerable amusement. He was what would now be called a "little American." One of a few paragraphs of his caustic and indignant outgivings survives:

"Land distributed in small holdings is the one safeguard to our new democracy. No land that serves an inch more of land than it can cultivate soundly and well. Here in America, we want quality not quantity. Why try to gobble up a whole continent all in one bite? We will be cursed if we do. We will make a desert out of a beautiful country."

DREAM OF U. S.

The dust storm of May 11, 1934, swept away 300,000,000 tons of topsoil. About 460,000,000 tons of topsoil flow annually into the Gulf of Mexico, down the Mississippi.

Wind and erosion together remove about 3,000,000,000 tons of topsoil. We used to have 816,-158,000 acres of forests. Now we have 484,898,000. In some states, 60 per cent of formerly rich soil is eroded beyond reclamation. Some of our industries, less brave, no less resourceful than their forebears, have reached the end of the trail.

"And the ill-favoured and land-fleshed kine did eat up the seven well-favoured and fat kine." So Pharaoh awoke."

Pharaoh's spirit was troubled and "he sent and called for all the magicians of Egypt and all the wise men thereof." As did we. These wise men, the scientists, tell us that it requires centuries to restore impoverished soil. But they explain the intricate organic relationship between waters, soils, grasses and forests, and say that, if we will, we still can save our heritage and be worthy guests in the House of Life.

Can we thus integrate our national life and resources without sacrificing our unique national tradition of individual enterprise? Our American dream may be at stake.

America Faces Bankruptcy

By H. PARKER WILLIS,

Former Secretary of the Federal Reserve Board

Reprinted From the July Issue of the American Mercury

ARTICLE II

Controlling a fund of two billion dollars lifted from the banks and the public by the simple expedient of reducing the gold content of the dollar, and with extensive machinery for rigging the market, the Treasury has not hesitated to manipulate the values of its own bonds and notes.

Indeed, the Treasury, in official statements, has admitted the spending in this way of fifty or sixty millions in a single month —the funds being used for "supporting the market" — notwithstanding that such maneuvers are forbidden to private citizens by the spirit, if not by the terms, of the Securities Exchange Act.

These processes must be recognized as inflation in the most accurate and sincere sense of the word.

They cannot otherwise be described.

Not only is it true that the world has never seen a situation of this kind on so great a scale, but it is also true that this process of inflation, where 100 per notes are substituted for real goods, subjects the nation to supreme danger.

Why, then, do the banks submit to such a wholesale looting of their resources?

Well, it is very difficult, indeed impossible, for any institution to refuse to consider the wishes of its largest stockholder.

Most persons have forgotten that the federal government, as revealed by the president of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in an address at the bankers' convention in New Orleans, is the chief preferred stockholder in approximately 6000 banks —that is to say, about two-fifths of the total number of incorporated institutions.

In all, the government has spent about a billion dollars in buying these great blocks of bank stock.

Although such purchases are defended and sanctified by various officials as having been necessary to "recapitalize" banks at a time of panic and thus to keep them open, the methods employed are the same as those long constituted a major evil in American finance.

Formerly a group of financiers and sometimes a single man was able to buy control of an institution. These men would then proceed to use the bank's loans and deposits for their own private purposes.

It was because of this danger that the 10 per cent restriction was long ago enacted, strengthened in 1933, and again in 1935. Nevertheless, today, American banks have been obliged by the insane demands of the Treasury (compelled to furnish the cash for public expenses) to purchase as much as 40 per cent of the total outstanding debt of the government—or about $18,-000,000,000.

The total capitalization of all banks of the country, however, is less than $6,000,000,000.

Our financial institutions, in other words, have been at times their capitalization in the form of obligations of one particular client—in this case, the United States Government.

This is THIRTY-FIVE TIMES the amount indicated by law as the maximum amount of paper to be held by a single maker.

The policy is thus in outright disregard of the laws which have been enacted for the safety of the banks, and amounts to appropriation of their resources.

If this is not inflation of the most bare-faced sort, what is it?
